WORLD AFFAIRS TALKS CENTRE ON LONDON

Mr. Norman Davis, shown chatting with M. Herriot at Geneva recently.

HERRIOT'S VISIT TO LONDON

DISARMAMENT HOPES

London, Oct. 10.
The French Premier, M. Herriot, who has accepted an invitation extended by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, will visit London probably on Wednesday or Thursday.

The purpose of the visit is to enable the two Premiers to discuss the difficulties which beset the problem of international disarmament.

It was with the object of helping forward a solution of some of these difficulties that the British Government a few days ago suggested the Four-Power Conference.
Their proposal was agreed to in principle by the Powers concerned but the date and place still remain unfixed.

It is hoped that the British Government's further initiative in inviting M. Herriot to London may help to solve these in addition to other points.

"TIMES" COMMENT.

Referring to certain criticisms which have been passed on the Four-Power Conference proposal,
The Times says: "There was never any idea that the projected meeting should usurp in any way or to the smallest extent the functions of the Disarmament Conference itself. On the contrary, the only object contemplated for it has been to reach such an understanding as will enable the conference to get down to effective work.—British Wireless.

THIS MORNING'S BLAZE

THREE BUILDINGS INVOLVED

At about 3 o'clock this morning,
a fire broke out at No. 22, Jer-vais Street, in the Nam Pak Hong business quarter, and burnt for an hour, causing extensive damage to the building and involving the two adjoining buildings, Nos. 20 and 24, before it was extinguished by the Brigade.

The firemen were early on the scene after the call, locating the outbreak in the cockpit of the ground floor of the building. The origin of the fire still remains a mystery as the building had remained unoccupied for some time,
and, in default of a better theory,
it can only be surmised that a candle or other person sleeping in the cockpit had inadvertently set
the place alight with a carelessly
discarded cigarette-end.

Although strenuous efforts were made by the Brigade to localise the outbreak, Nos. 20 and 24 were in a short space of time involved in the conflagration, and were partially damaged before the vast amount of water pumped into them had the desired effect.

The South British Insurance
Co., and the Heung On Insurance
Co., are reported to be amongst the concerns affected by the fire.

Head injuries were received by Ng Luk-chuen, a student, as a result of being knocked down by a private car in Tin Lok Lane yesterday. He was taken to the Government Civil Hospital.

AMERICA AND THE LYTTON REPORT

NORMAN DAVIS DENIES INTERFERENCE

NOT PART OF JOB IN LONDON

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Oct. 11.
The presence in London of Mr.
Norman H. Davis, the American financial expert and "amateur diplomatist," has been linked with the forthcoming consideration of the Lytton Report.

In an interview last night, however, he said he was in London for naval discussions, chiefly.
He was certainly not entrusted with any mandate or mission regarding the situation in the Far East.

Mr. Davis yesterday saw Sir John Simon and had a general discussion with him upon world affairs. He did not deny that the Far East might have been mentioned, but refused to admit that any reference to the Sino-Japanese dispute or the Lytton Report had any special significance.

CASUAL MENTION.

He said, on the other hand, that if they talked about the Far East, the matter was only brought up in the way that any of the presents world problems might be touched upon during such a conversation.

Mr. Davis, who is a Democrat in political colour, has been adviser to the U.S. Treasury in connexion with foreign loans.
American member of the Armi-stices Commission, financial adviser to President Wilson, member of several Reparations Commissions, assistant Secretary to the Treasury, Under-Secretary of State and a member of the International Economic Conference at Geneva in 1927.

CONFERENCES TO-DAY.

London, Oct. 10.
Mr. Norman Davis starts his series of conferences with British Government officials and economic experts to-morrow.

He is fulfilling a double mission in preparing for American participation in the World Economic Conference and attempting to reconcile the Hoover disarmament proposals with the British disarmament programme.

His first talk will be with Sir Walter Layton, the famous British economist.

It is understood that there is no likelihood of the MacDonald-Herriot talks being extended to include Mr. Davis.—Reuter.

FORMER FIJI GOVERNOR

DEATH OF SIR E. IM THURN

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Oct. 10.
The death occurred at Preston-pans, in Scotland, to-day, of Sir Everard Im Thurn, K.C.M.G., former Governor of Fiji, at the age of 80 years.

The deceased had seen considerable service under the Colonial Office, and from 1897 to 1899 he was employed on the Venezuelan Boundary Commission.
While in British Guiana, he did much exploring, and successfully ascended Roraima, a mountain which had baffled all previous attempts. He had written several books on anthropology and natural history, and in 1910-20 was President of the Anthropological Institute.

He was Colonial Secretary of Fiji from 1901 to 1904 and Governor from 1904 to 1910, when he retired.

ALLIED ARMY LOSES HEAVILY.

Nanking, Oct. 11.
A thousand soldiers and five regimental commanders were killed in some extraordinarily sanguinary fighting near Chengtu when General Lo Chieh-chow and General Li China-yu attacked
Shunchin on the night of October 6th.

General Liu Wen-hui's troops counter-attacked the following day, when the allied forces were defeated with heavy losses.—
Reuter.

LIBERAL HOPES DASHED

"L. C." REMAINS IRRECONCILABLE

NO RE-UNION

London, Oct. 10.

Hopes of Liberal re-union following the resignations from the Government of Sir Herbert Samuel, Sir Archibald Sinclair and their particular followers in the Liberal ranks, have received a set-back.

Lloyd George, the former leader of the party, was specially invited to attend a meeting to be held at Queen's Hall on Wednesday (October 12) in the hope of a rapprochement between
Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Herbert
Samuel. The meeting is being held for the purpose of expressing approval of the ex-Ministers' conduct.

Mr. Lloyd George has spooled hopes by refusing to attend the meeting. He bases his refusal on the ground that Sir Herbert Samuel proposes to continue in support of the Government on points of policy other than those arising out of the Ottawa Agreement.

Mr. Lloyd George contends that a general revival is impossible unless the Government's "reactionary" record, not merely tariffs, is repudiated.—Reuter.

YOUNG SOLDIER'S ESCAPADES

OUT ON THE RAMPAGE: BLAMES THE ARMY FOR HIS TROUBLES

The escapades of an Argyll & Sutherland Highlander who had a very hectic time following his escape from the Samshulpo Camp while in military custody on the early morning of Friday, were recounted to Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning, when Pte.
James Hamilton, the soldier in question, was charged with a number of offences.

Hamilton was charged with (1) stealing a mah jong set from Mr. Ichihara, Sub-Manager of the N.Y.K. during a surreptitious visit to his residence at No. 5, Robinson Road; (2) unlawful possession of a travelling clock, a crucifix, and a fork and knife,
the property of Rev. Fr. Bourke, S.J., of the Wah Yung College in Robinson Road; (3) unlawfully driving a motor car, No. 2231, without the permission of the owner, Mr. Rouillon; and (4) driving the same car without a driver's licence.

Det. Inspector John Murphy,

STARTLING RUMOUR

CEDING OF TIMOR TO JAPAN!

OFFICIAL DENIAL FROM LISBON

Lisbon, Oct. 11.

The Portuguese Foreign Office denies the report, which is alleged to have created a stir in Australia, to the effect that Portugal is contemplating ceding her rights in Timor to Japan.—
Reuter.

NEW YORK SHARE SLUMP

SHARP DOWNWARD TENDENCY

New York, Oct. 10.

The New York Stock Market resumed a downwards course very sharply to-day and losses of from one to six points were numerous. Railway stocks were especially severely hit, Union Pacific falling 6½ points on the day.
Over two million shares were done.—Reuter.

GREEK QUAKE DISASTER

VIOLENT SHOCKS CONTINUE

Athens, Oct. 11.

Earthquake shocks of considerable intensity continue to cause terror to the inhabitants of the Chalcidic Peninsula, the scene of the recent disaster.—
Reuter.

MORO BATTLE

THIRTY KILLED IN ENGAGEMENT

Manila, Oct. 11.

It has been ascertained that thirty Moros were killed and many wounded in the fight at Jobo, in which twelve members of the Constabulary lost their lives.
Preparations are being made for a punitive assault on the Moro village of Tayungan as soon as the women and children can be evacuated.—Reuter.

The following message has been received by the Naval Wireless authorities: "The 'Greenland Whisler', von Gronau's seaplane, which made a forced landing at 9 a.m. yesterday, was rescued by the steamer Karagola at about 7.00 p.m. Every-

BUSY WEEK FOR CABINET

Ottawa; Land Annuities; Economic Conference; Disarmament.

London, Oct. 10.

The Prime Minister, who on Saturday returned from a week's holiday in Scotland, to-day took up a study of current questions with his ministerial colleagues, several of whom, including the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, visited him at No. 10, Downing Street.

Important political questions will be under examination this week and a series of Cabinet meetings, beginning to-morrow afternoon, will take place preparatory to the reassembly of Parliament on October 18th.

M. Herriot's visit will bring under notice certain international questions and urgent Imperial and domestic matters also await attention.

OTTAWA SECRETS.

The latter include the final Cabinet approval of the draft legislation necessary to implement the Ottawa Conference agreements.

Schedules of the preferences omitted from the published text of the Ottawa agreements will be announced on Wednesday night.

In view of Friday's opening of formal negotiations with the Irish Free State delegates, the questions in dispute with Ireland will also be under the further consideration of the Ministers during the next few days. It is anticipated that one month will suffice for winding up the work of the present session of Parliament which will probably be prorogued about November 17, the new session being opened by the King on November 22.—British Wireless.

JOHNNY KING BEATS DICK CORBETT

London, Oct. 10.

At Manchester to-night, in a fifteen-rounds contest for the bantamweight championship of Great Britain and the Lonsdale Belt, Johnny King (Manchester) defeated Dick Corbett (London) on points.

Corbett was the holder of the title and belt. He fought a grand fight, but King was definitely superior on this occasion.—Reuter.

FIRST BLOOD TO NEW ROAD

CAR SKIDS OVER EMBANKMENT

SHANGHAI MISHAP

(Special to "Telegraph").

Shanghai, Oct. 11.

The ceremonial opening of the magnificent new road which links Shanghai with Nanking was marred by its first accident, a prominent business man and his family being involved.

The open-air dedication ceremony at Nanchiao, the starting-point of the new road, was followed by more than a hundred motor-cars which passed over the road and subsequently the accident was reported.

Mr. Wei Tung-hua, the manager of the American Leaf Tobacco Company, was driving with his family along the road, when the car skidded violently, swung off the road and rolled down a twenty-foot embankment.

REMARKABLE ESCAPES.

The occupants had remarkable escapes. The four passengers all suffered from slight shock, but were not injured in any way.
The chauffeur was badly bruised and scratched.

The opening of the Shanghai-Nanchiao road marked the completion of one of the most ambitious projects ever undertaken by the Chekiang-Kiangsu provincial authorities.—Reuter.

VISCOUNT BYNG PROMOTED

FIELD MARSHAL'S RANK

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Oct. 10.

It is officially announced that Viscount Byng of Vimy has been promoted to the rank of Field
Marshal in succession to the late Viscount Plumer.

Viscount Byng, who recently
retired from the post of Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, has had a most active career, having seen service in the Soudan, South Africa and the Great War. In the latter, he was promoted General after his brilliant advance towards Cambrai in November, 1917, while he gained another big success in August of

For his War services, he was raised to the Peerage and received a grant of £30,000. He retired from the Army in 1919, and from 1921 to 1926 he was Governor-General of Canada.

AERIAL HEIGHT RECORD

BRITISH AVIATOR COMPLIMENTED

London, Oct. 10.

Lord Londonderry, on behalf of the Air Council, in a congratulatory message to C. F. Uwins on winning the aeroplane height record for Britain, which has now been confirmed by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, says the success is a tribute alike to Uwins' own skill and to the efficiency of British aircraft and the engine used.—British Wireless.

The Royal Observatory reports that the anticyclone over North China has again increased in intensity.
The depression has moved into the Pacific to the east of Hokkaido. Fresh monsoon will continue along the China Coast and over the Northern China Sea.

TREASURY'S LATEST OPERATION

£150,000,000 BONDS AT TWO PER CENT.

London, Oct. 10.
The Treasury announces the issue of Treasury Bonds to the value of £150,000,000. The bonds are being issued at par, will be redeemable during 1935/36 and will bear interest at the rate of two per cent.

Holders 4½ per cent.
Treasury Bonds, the redemption of which is announced, may surrender their holdings in exchange for the new stock. The lists for cash applications will be closed on or before October 12. The lists for conversion applications will be closed on October 17.— Reuter.

THE DOLLAR SQUEEZED

GOLD STANDARD AGAIN THOUGHT IN PERIL

HOOVER SPEECH MISREAD

New York, Oct. 10.

The American gold dollar which has been subjected to a hammering on the Continent, to-day recovered against foreign currencies.

The temporary scare about the stability of the dollar which developed on European exchanges is dismissed in New York as ridiculous and was presumably due to a misreading of President Hoover's speech at Des Moines.

The President, it will be recalled, admitted that America was nearly forced off the gold standard earlier this year. Since then all danger has disappeared, it is claimed.

SOUND POSITION.

An official of the New York Federal Reserve Board, in an interview with Reuter, said that the total of the gold stocks in the United States is approximately $34,200,000,000. "Free gold" available for export amounts to about $31,200,000,000 and foreign balances in the United States account for a further $700,000,000.

A large part of the foreign balances must, however, be kept in the United States for ordinary trading purposes. Exchange speculators in Europe could, therefore, withdraw only some $200-000,000.

LITTLE OR NO DANGER.

In the opinion of the official, only a widespread panic among Americans themselves and the hoarding and exporting of gold could drive America off the gold standard.

It is noteworthy that since the end of the foreign panic in June last about $300,000,000 have flowed back to the United States.—
Reuter.

TWINS BORN IN LATRINE

POIGNANT CASE OF YOUNG WOMAN

A poignant case is reported concerning Chan Sik, a young woman of 24, who, deserted by her friends and having no home, went into a public latrine at Yen Chow Street, Shamshulpo yesterday, where she gave birth to twin boys, both still-born.

Her case being brought to the notice of the police authorities, the unfortunate woman was taken to the Kwong Wah Hospital, where she is being given the best of medical attention and care.

Alfredo Veloso, a Filipino, was removed to the Government Civil Hospital from Gloucester Building, the victim of opium poisoning. After two hours' treatment he sufficiently recovered to enable his discharge.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

We have often been told that five to five and one-half high card tricks should produce game at the most favourable contract. That is, of course, true in general, but sometimes the most favourable contract is so well concealed that even the most skilful players cannot find it.

Today's hand was played in the National Masters' Contract Pair championship by 44 of the finest players in America, and not one of the North and South pairs succeeded in reaching the proper declaration.

♠K-J-9-8-7
♥10-9-6
♦10-9-8-7
♣10
♠4-3	NORTH	♠A-5
♥4-2	WEST	♥8-4-3
♦J-7	EAST	♦Q-5-4
♣Q-5-4	SOUTH	♣J-8-7
		♣6-3
		♥A-K-5-2
		♥A-K-3-2
		♥A-K

A little analysis will show that game can be made rather easily in spades if played with North as the declarer. However, the South players were, without exception, so proud of their aces and kings that they refused to let North play the hand at spades even though he bid and re-bid that suit.

The Bidding.

South's opening bid depended largely upon the system played or on his individual preference. Most South players bid one or two hearts, although some preferred to open with one or two no trump. In every case North bid spades. South was delighted to hear the spade bid for it appeared to fill up the only weakness in his powerful no trump hand, and he carried the contract to three no trump without hesitation.

The Play.

West opened the device of clubs and declarer won with the ace over East's jack. He now has two possible courses—he may try to establish North's spades, which seems almost impossible in view of his own doubleton, or he may play for a break in diamonds, hoping to establish the fourth card of that suit.

In either case the opponents will establish their clubs as soon as they are permitted to take the lead. If declarer elects to try for the spades and takes the double finesse of the nine spot on the second trick, he can make exactly eight tricks. North can easily take ten tricks if spades are trump, conceding only one diamond and two spade tricks to the adversaries.

HIS LAST RIDE

CHICAGO'S MOST FEARED GANG LEADER

Chicago, Oct. 10.

Frank McElrath, one of the most feared of the local gangsters who was nicknamed "The Grinning Killer," died quietly in a hospital to-day from pneumonia. His friends held an Irish wake over the body.

McElrath was credited with having invented the "One Way Ride," namely, the taking of an enemy for his last joyride in a motor car.

More than 400 gang murders are attributed to him.—Reuter's American Service.

INSULL DETAINED

CAUGHT BY POLICE IN ATHENS HOTEL

Athens, Oct. 10.

Samuel Insull, head of the huge American bankrupt combine, who has been sitting around Europe, was detained at his hotel here to-day, soon after his arrival, at the instance of the United States Minister, who, it is understood, has asked the Police to detain Insull, pending the receipt of a request for extradition.—Reuter.

Mysterious Cable.

Chicago, Oct. 10.

The Illinois State Attorney has subpoenaed Insull's secretary with a view to ascertaining who cabled him $25,000 to Athens. The secretary admitted cabling the financier at Paris and Italy but said he had no knowledge of the remittance.

It is indicated authoritatively in Washington that whether Insull is returned to the United States or not, depends on the Greek Government; for although the United States has ratified the Greek official journal publishing the extradition treaty, the ratifications have not yet been exchanged.

The State Attorney has urged the Governor of Illinois to request the State Department to ask Greece to deport Insull to Italy where the United States Embassy has already requested the authorities to arrest him.—Reuter.

GERMAN AIRMAN FORCED DOWN.

CAPT. VON GRONAU SENDS S.O.S. MESSAGE

Manila, Oct. 10.

An S.O.S. message has been picked up from Capt. Von Gronau, stating that he had been forced down in the Indian Ocean, north-west of Port Swettenham.—Reuter.

Rangoon, Oct. 10.

Von Gronau was forced down into rough seas off the Burma coast, 100 miles south of Moulmein, owing to a broken water-pump.

A British steamer is in touch with the disabled craft and is attempting to tow the machine.—Reuter.

The distress calls from Capt. Von Gronau were picked up at the Cape d'Agular, wireless station. Messages were immediately sent out to all ships in the vicinity asking them to keep a look-out for the Greenland Whale, and report immediately to the Rangoon air base if they sighted the distressed flying boat.

HUGE ELECTRICAL ENTERPRISE.

GIGANTIC BARRAGE VON THE RHINE

London, Sept. 10.

A Paris message states that the inauguration has taken place of the vast hydro-electric work at Kembs, on the Rhine below Basel and the first section of the Alsace Canal, which will run parallel with the river.

The hydro-electric station will be finished next year and will be the most powerful in Europe, with an annual output of seven hundred million kilowatt hours, and will serve the whole of eastern France, as far as Troyes.

The construction of the power station has entailed building a huge barrage, divided into five arches each with a span of 98 feet.

The barrage, built by the State, has cost 150 million francs, and altogether some 650 millions will be spent on the enterprise.—Our Own Correspondent.

"Good morning!
How are you?"

There's little enough need to ask her that question—even so early in the morning. Rosy from her bath—eyes sparkling, radiating health vigour and vitality. She enjoys the robust health that every woman should have.

Why Should Women Suffer?

Why any more than men from aches and ills? It seems unfair that men should escape, whilst women have to submit to those health burdens which the weaker sex endure. Really there is no reason why they should. Women—like men—were intended by Nature to be healthy and enjoy life.

But so many women fail to maintain the blood stream in a healthy and plentiful condition. And they pay the penalty of neglect with those wearisome back pains, that weakness and emaciation, pallor, headaches, and depression.

Women who value health and beauty should safeguard their blood supply by means of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The plentiful rich pure blood which these pills create enable a woman to meet the peculiar demands of Nature and maintain her health and vigour at the same time.

The Late Arnold Bennett's Last Long Story

"DREAM OF DESTINY"

Roland left fairly early, partly because Mr. Friar in a charming and very subtle way indicated by hints, or hints at hints that bed was the best place not only for a middle-aged man but for everybody else; and partly because, in order to orientate himself and classify his sensations, he wanted to be alone. He lived alone, and for him nothing but solitude was favourable to full reflection. Phoebe accompanied him along the endless corridor to the entrance-hall. She was gay, happy, sisterly, and she helped with his thin overcoat, taking it from the attentive hands of un decipherable Missenden.

"I shall see you to the lift," she said in imperious high spirits. "Leave the door open, Missenden, will you?"

And, walking along another endless corridor by her side, Roland perceived that for several hours he had been living in a new world. He had forgotten domesticity. His parents had been dead for years; he had no brothers, and his only sister was married to an American in Boston, which suited her. Sometimes, but not often, he accepted an invitation to lunch if it promised to be specially sparkling. He rarely dined at home. He had plenty of dinner-invitations and did not refuse them. He rarely returned hospitality, because this was not expected of him; but now and then, for the sake of his conscience, he entertained a small party in the ladies' rooms of his club, where the food could be eaten and the service was unimpeachable. Women enjoyed coming to his club, though they hardly ever got even a glimpse of the sacred, forbidden rooms for males. To find themselves under the famous roof flattered them and excited them. He knew a large number of people very well; he talked freely with them. But he had no home-life, none of the negligible, totally informal ease of home-life, save occasionally when Tommy arrived in Half Moon Street and they could tell each other to go to hell and things like that. His existence was formalized. The domesticity of the Friars' was utterly feared. His heart beat with concern, it was formalized, but only superficially. In essence it was quite unconventional, despite the over-elaboration of Mr. Friar's speechifying. He had talked little with Mrs. Friar, and yet he felt that he was as close to her as to any woman of his acquaintance,—perhaps closer.

or. As for Phoebe, she inspired him with a desire for children. He had a vision of the delicious luxury of children, his own,—luxury unique. But if he was to enjoy children as Mr. and Mrs. Friar enjoyed Phoebe, he ought already to have begun the ticklish enterprise of procreation.

"You do like daddy and mummy, don't you?" Phoebe demanded, mocking but serious, at the angle of the corridor.

"I should just think I did!" he answered.

Difficult to conceive her as a star actress, then! She was the domestic daughter, completely. He cared for actresses only as casual associates, to lark around with conversationally. As a rule they were dull companions, save when talking about the stage; when not talking about the stage they were mum, unresponsive. And their impulsiveness, their unreliability in the matter of time,—how trying! He could not imagine himself as the husband of an expensive actress, dividing her with her public, and going to bed at 2 a.m. Actresses ought to marry actors, to whom the turning of night and day upside-down was a natural and necessary operation. In any other union an actress by her calling was cut off not only from the world but from her husband. But Phoebe was different. And doubtless other actresses here and there were different. Some retired from the stage at marriage, with impassioned relief. The trouble was that the majority of them, drawn irresistibly by the sinister fascination of spot-lights and applause, went back to the stage after a few years. And what then? But Phoebe would not be among those.

They were at the lift. Phoebe put her hand over the bell, but did not ring.

"There's something I wanted to tell you," she said. He saw that she was nervous, shy.

"Yes?" What now?

"I had a funny dream about you last night."

The single word "dream" shook him, frightened him, horrified him. It had become the most terrible word in the language. He was utterly scared. His heart beat with concern, it was formalized, but only superficially. In essence it was quite unconventional, despite the over-elaboration of Mr. Friar's speechifying. He had talked little with Mrs. Friar, and yet he felt that he was as close to her as to any woman of his acquaintance,—perhaps closer.

He had been a fool, a madman, a criminal, within his mind, and in his acts. He would never see Phoebe again. He had been the most reckless being ever born. He would put seas between himself and her. And she, and her parents, might think what they chose. Homely details of domestic life? Horror! Fancy the engagement of the monthly nurse, the arrival of the doctor with his mysterious bag! Horror! The cold sweat of waiting, waiting. . . . He wanted to cry out and dash away from her at that instant. But the deep instinct of self-control restrained him.

"Yes?" he repeated in a quiet voice. Did she notice that he was trembling, that his hand fluttered. He had both hands behind his back. Had he paled? Why did she not exclaim in alarm: "What's the matter with you? Whatever's the matter?"

"It was like this," she replied hesitatingly. "You took to writing, and you had a really great idea for a play, and you wrote it, and I played in it, and it was a simply terrific success. In my dream I had always been telling you that you could write."

"But I can't," he said weakly. "And I shan't try. I've never even thought of writing."

"Well," she said, "you never know. I thought I'd tell you. Rather funny, though, isn't it?" She was artless, as innocent, as confiding as a schoolgirl.

"Very," he said.

She pushed the lift-bell. The cube of light rose up at once, and illuminated the glass over the lift-doors. Clang! Bang! The doors opened. The lift-man touched his hat and smiled as pleasantly as though the innumerable monotony of his task was ever full of interesting surprises and fresh delights.

"Think it over. Good night. See you soon," she said, clasping his hand suddenly.

He was enclosed within the lift. He sank.

"My God! My God!" he thought. "It's all right. But what an escape! The fright she gave me! However, it's all right. I'm as well as usual. But he had been so perturbed that he could not get to sleep for hours in the lonely comfort of what he termed his home."

SYMPHONIC CONCERT.

PENINSULA HOTEL FUNCTION ON SUNDAY

Another delightful Symphonic concert was given at the Peninsula Hotel on Sunday night, and the rounds of applause bore evidence to the excellent programme.

The special feature was the performance on the xylophone by Master Sadao Iwai, the accomplished Japanese youth. His masterful renderings of "Gypsy Airs" by Sarasate accompanied on the piano by his mother, Madam Iwai, "The Mocking Bird" by Stobbe with full orchestra accompaniment, and an encore number "Long, Long Ago" also with orchestral accompaniment, were a treat. Rapturous applause was accorded each item and his wonderful playing will long be remembered.

Altogether the entertainment afforded a most enjoyable evening to the large gathering present.

bed that he could not get to sleep for hours in the lonely comfort of what he termed his home.

"I'm a bachelor," he said to himself.

MASTERPIECE

Arnold Bennett's last long story was left unfinished, but this does not spoil its worth or readable quality, but rather adds a mystery value which will be found very intriguing.

THE SMALLEST LOCOMOTIVE CAN GO THROUGH A RING

London, Sept. 1.
The world's smallest locomotive in the long, is driven by an electric motor weighing 150 lb., pulls a load of 150 lb., and will pass through an ordinary finger ring with 1/16 in. to spare.

This is one of a thousand marvels to be seen at the Model Engineering Exhibition, which opens on Thursday at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster, where grandfathers of 80 will compete with schoolboys of 13 for honours in the world of miniature engineering.

This tiny locomotive is the work of Mr. Leonard R. Beale, of Hampstead, and will appear side by side with models ranging up to 8 ft. in length.

No fewer than 6,500 hours—one's spare time for six and a half years—have been devoted by Mr. Alfred G. Woodward, of Dunstable, to making a scale model of a pair of beam pumping engines.

28 Miles Every Week
To secure the exact dimensions and make his scale-drawings, Mr. Woodward motor-cycled 28 miles once a week for two years to the factory where the original pumps were working.

Dr. J. Bradbury, formerly in practice at Brighton, can bent this. He has devoted 8,000 hours to the making of a scale model, in silver, of the famous Rocket locomotive. It is complete down to the smallest detail, and he values it at £1,000.

An international flavour is added by a model locomotive chassis from South Africa, a model train, as used on the Liverpool Manchester Railway of 1838, from Cincinnati, U.S.A., and a tiny replica of the clipper Sovereign of the Sea which comes from Champaign-sur-Marne, France.

Professional and working men of every class are contributing to this £10,000 exhibition.

WOMAN DOCTOR ON BIRTH CONTROL

"LADY NEXT DOOR" AS ADVISER

A woman doctor's comments on birth control are included in a report on maternal mortality issued by the Ministry of Health.

The comments are made by Dame Janet Campbell, Senior Medical Officer for Maternity and Child Welfare, Ministry of Health.

High maternal mortality in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in Lancashire and in Wales, is the subject of the report, which follows an inquiry for which Dame Janet was responsible. She investigated her conditions in some Yorkshire industrial towns.

After recording suggestions that instructions in methods of birth control should be freely available for all who desire it, Dame Janet says: "There appears to be much less public demand for contraceptive instruction than some suppose."

"Propaganda attempted by a voluntary birth control association in one of the Yorkshire towns visited was a failure."

"It does not follow that birth control is not practised. It may be that women often prefer the advice given by a companion in the mill, or by the 'lady next door.'"

VITAL ISSUES

In demanding immediate negotiations for the cancellation of war debts and reparations, the British Labour Party is taking a stand which represents the considered opinion of many of the world's leading economists and statesmen. At the moment, the position has been left in the air by the Lausanne Conference, which, while it agreed that the wiping out of reparations was necessary, made this contingent on Germany's creditors reaching a war-debt settlement with the United States. The situation in this respect is, however, complicated by the U.S. Presidential election, which will have to be decided before America reaches a decision one way or the other. Both the Republicans and the Democrats have expressed themselves against cancellation, although President Hoover favours some quid pro quo arrangement whereby the United States would secure favourable trade concessions, possibly in the direction of lowered tariffs. It must, of course, be remembered that both the Republican and Democratic declarations on this debt issue are largely intended for home consumption, and it is quite conceivable that when the election is over, whichever party succeeds will have to come down closer to realities in dealing with the problem.

The various attempts which have been made for a solution of these inter-related problems of war debts and reparations have so far been quite fruitless. The Hoover holiday, which postponed the payment of all political debts for a year, was not a solution, and in the meantime both the special advisory committee of the Bank of International Settlements and the Lausanne Conference have reached the conclusion that a wiping out of reparations is essential. The world is still faced with the duty of making a final settlement of these issues in order to eliminate a fatal source of ever-recurring political danger and economic catastrophe. One suggestion which has been put forward is that if political conditions make a final settlement impossible in the near future, arrangements should be made for a general moratorium of at least ten years, the time to be devoted to cementing international solidarity and the re-establishment of the world economic order on a basis of co-operation instead of economic warfare. Those who urge this plan think that such a policy of general conciliation might bring the United States to make a voluntary remittance of the war payments due.

There can be little doubt that the solution of war debts and reparations will only be found when the nations have solved the general problems of money and credit, production and exchange, in a spirit of practical realism. This will have to be done with the object of rebuilding economic activity on a broad basis, taking into account the systematic and progressive development of the needs of the people and the methodical extension of international exchange. The coming World Economic Conference, if it is handled wisely, should mark the starting point of this new era. If it does not reach agreement of some kind, the whole economic structure of the world may easily collapse, for, as Mr. Baldwin has just stated, we are now at the parting of the ways. Never in history was wise statesmanship more needed. Let us hope that the opportunity soon to be provided will be utilised to the fullest extent possible.

For some time the orchid has reigned as the aristocrat among the tamed or domesticated plants. Horticulturists have taken especial pride in the development of variations of the species. They have travelled far and expended large sums in their efforts to expand the catalogue of known specimens. More announcement of orchid shows has been enough to fill great halls with enthusiastic admirers who have lingered lovingly over rare blooms. Collections of orchid plants from many parts of the world have been a hobby of wealthy patrons of floriculture. And why not? The orchid is a monocotyledonous plant, and any plant that bears a name possessing the size, texture and mispronunciation possibilities of monocotyledonous is entitled to a front seat in floriculture. Orchids are abundant in damp equatorial regions where they display themselves in brilliant form and colour. Some beautiful specimens are to be found on the Peak just now. In temperate climates they express themselves in more humble raiment, the lady's slipper, being a notable example. But all this is aside from the point. Those members of the orchid family which have been winning all the gold medals at the horticultural exhibitions "needn't feel so big." Down in southern Queensland the orchids are not plants—they're trees. They cannot be anything else, for they grow to a height of forty-five feet, bear hundreds of blossoms, and bear the modest name of Calceola foliata monocotyledonous. The discovery of an "orchid tree" in the wilds of Queensland so stirred the "orchidologists" of Australia that plans were soon under way to send a botanical expedition from Melbourne into the area. The party left last month to study the phenomenally large species. When orchids grow to a height of a four-storey building, one may expect the discovery of buttercups as tall as telegraph poles and daisies that are used for flagpoles. And even the beanstalk story becomes almost believable.

The wedding will shortly take place between Mr. Frank Goldby, lecturer, the University, Hongkong, and Miss Helen Rosa Tomlin, 5, Clifton-place, London, en route for Hongkong by the s.s. Comorin.

Jewellery valued at $1,500 was stolen from the residence of Mr. J. Rodger, 49 Granville Road, Kowloon, yesterday afternoon.

Prompt action taken by the police resulted in the recovery of some of the stolen property.

Mr. Rodger, who is employed at the Central Agency Ltd., reported the burglary to the police at 4.30 p.m. Thieves had broken in his bedroom on the first floor and after collecting Mrs. Rodger's jewellery had escaped.

The articles stolen were:
A lady's watch, valued at $360.
One platinum ring, $300.
Three gold finger rings, $25.
One diamond ring, $100.
One pearl ring, $50.
Three brooches, $60.
One gold bracelet, $10.
Two necklaces and pendants, $20.
One gold slave bangle, $250.

Miscellaneous pieces of jewellery, $200.

Hongkong currency totalling $130.

Immediately on receiving the report, the police began investigations and within a few hours recovered the valuable gold slave bangle and small pieces of jewellery valued at $200.

"I.O.D. CENTRAL"

(By J. M. KELLEHER)

He's stern, but the sternness is very often an affectation to hide the strong grain of sympathy in his make-up; a sympathy which will come to the surface too often if he is not careful. Sometime he wears three stripes on his white uniformed arm and sometimes he wears a braided shoulder strap. Unconsciously he is a keen student of psychology—his job makes him that way.

You must meet him. He is the Inspector (or perhaps the sergeant) on duty at any Police Station in the Co' wy.

The voice over the telephone is brusque and business-like—"Inspector on Duty, Central." "Sergeant on Duty Number Two." "I.O.D. Water Police."

If the wife has lost her handbag with the month's pay cheque, or if one of the kiddies has been bitten by a dog, if a thief has broken in and burgled your house or if the cook-boy has gone off to the country with many of your moveable possessions, you'll make your complaint to this man and like him.

How many times has he figured in a scene such as this?

A European sergeant has brought a young Chinese woman into the station. Her baskets of fruit and cakes are sufficient to indicate the charge which is to be laid against her. She has been hawking without a licence.

Through a cynical interpreter she tells this story. Her husband has gone to his native village (alternatively, he died last week). The child on her back is her own and so is the one grasping her skirts and gazing with frightened eyes at all the men in uniform. There are three more in the tiny cubicle she calls her home. This is the only way she can get money.

But she hasn't five dollars. As God is her judge, the 43 cents wrapped in a dirty piece of newspaper is all the money she possesses. No, she has no relatives and she cannot and anyone to look after her children if she has to spend the night in the cells.

A look of long-suffering passes between the Inspector on duty and the sergeant who has brought the woman in. Their hands go into their pockets and they make up the bail money between them.

"Now get out of here!" thunders the man in charge, simulating great wrath. "Turn up at the Court in the morning and if I ever catch you hawking again . . . ." and any one of twenty threats is employed to make the woman more careful in future.

"Child missing—suspected kidnapping." That entry appears regularly in the report sheets of every police station in the Colony.

A mother and father walk in to the charge room, jabbering at a furious rate.

"What's wrong with them?" asks the harassed I.O.D. who isn't half way through his morning report yet.

"They say their child is missing"

replicates the interpreter. "Have they looked for him?" is the next question and there follows a harangue in Chinese between the interpreter and the bereaved parents.

Finally, "No, they have not looked for him, but someone may have kidnapped the boy. Was it not their duty inform the police?"

And the entry of "Child missing—suspected kidnapping" goes down on the sheet, to be erased an hour later by the information that the boy was found in another street, playing with a hunch of his cronies.

But the Inspector on Duty's time is not taken up wholly in dealing with frivolous matters.

There are times when over the police group line a strained voice reports an armed hold-up, or even a murder. Rough details are jotted down. The alarm clangs and the emergency unit lines up. Men rush about the station buckling on belts and revolvers. But there is no confusion. The Inspector on Duty is everywhere giving rapid orders and seeing that no hitch occurs in the organisation.

He waits by the telephone for the second, third and fourth reports to come through, sending more men if required or taking with a sigh of relief the information that an arrest has been made and all is now quiet.

It's not the easiest life in the world and the breaks are not always good. Promotion is often a mirage but you rarely hear of a grouch.

Hongkong owes a lot to its Police Force but the pity is so few seem to realise it.

THIS DEPRESSION

By Edward Kelly, Broke Broker.

What with budgets and trade depressions, this Colony needs an Official Spendthrift. In this, we have discovered an infallible method of bringing about a worldwide trade revival.

All the Government has to do is to issue notes free to qualified spendthrifts, who will immediately rush them (the notes, we mean) into circulation.

We can produce garnishee orders, summonses, final notices and threatening letters sufficient to prove our qualifications.

We have got it all mapped out what we'll do when the Government appoint us to this position.

In the morning we shall be lifted out of bed, and carried to the bathroom in a litter, and having been bathed, we shall toy with a little breakfast—some simple little menu like sal hepatica and lettuce. Meanwhile one of our valets will mount his motor cycle and ride along inside the wardrobe until he comes to the suit we are going to wear that day. We shall select from our fleet the car we think will suit our mood and the rest will be thrown away to be burnt.

We will then drive up to the Treasury and will greet the Hon. Treasurer and say, "Well, old chap, we're afraid you'll have to get out of here. We've bought the place."

"But the records . . . !" he'll say. "We've bought the place as a going concern, and it is our intention to convert the building into a home for indigent Compradores", we'll answer.

"There are a few lady typists here," he will whimper, "I wouldn't like to see them flung out on the cold world . . ."

"Tut, man! What do you think we've bought the place for. They'll be all right."

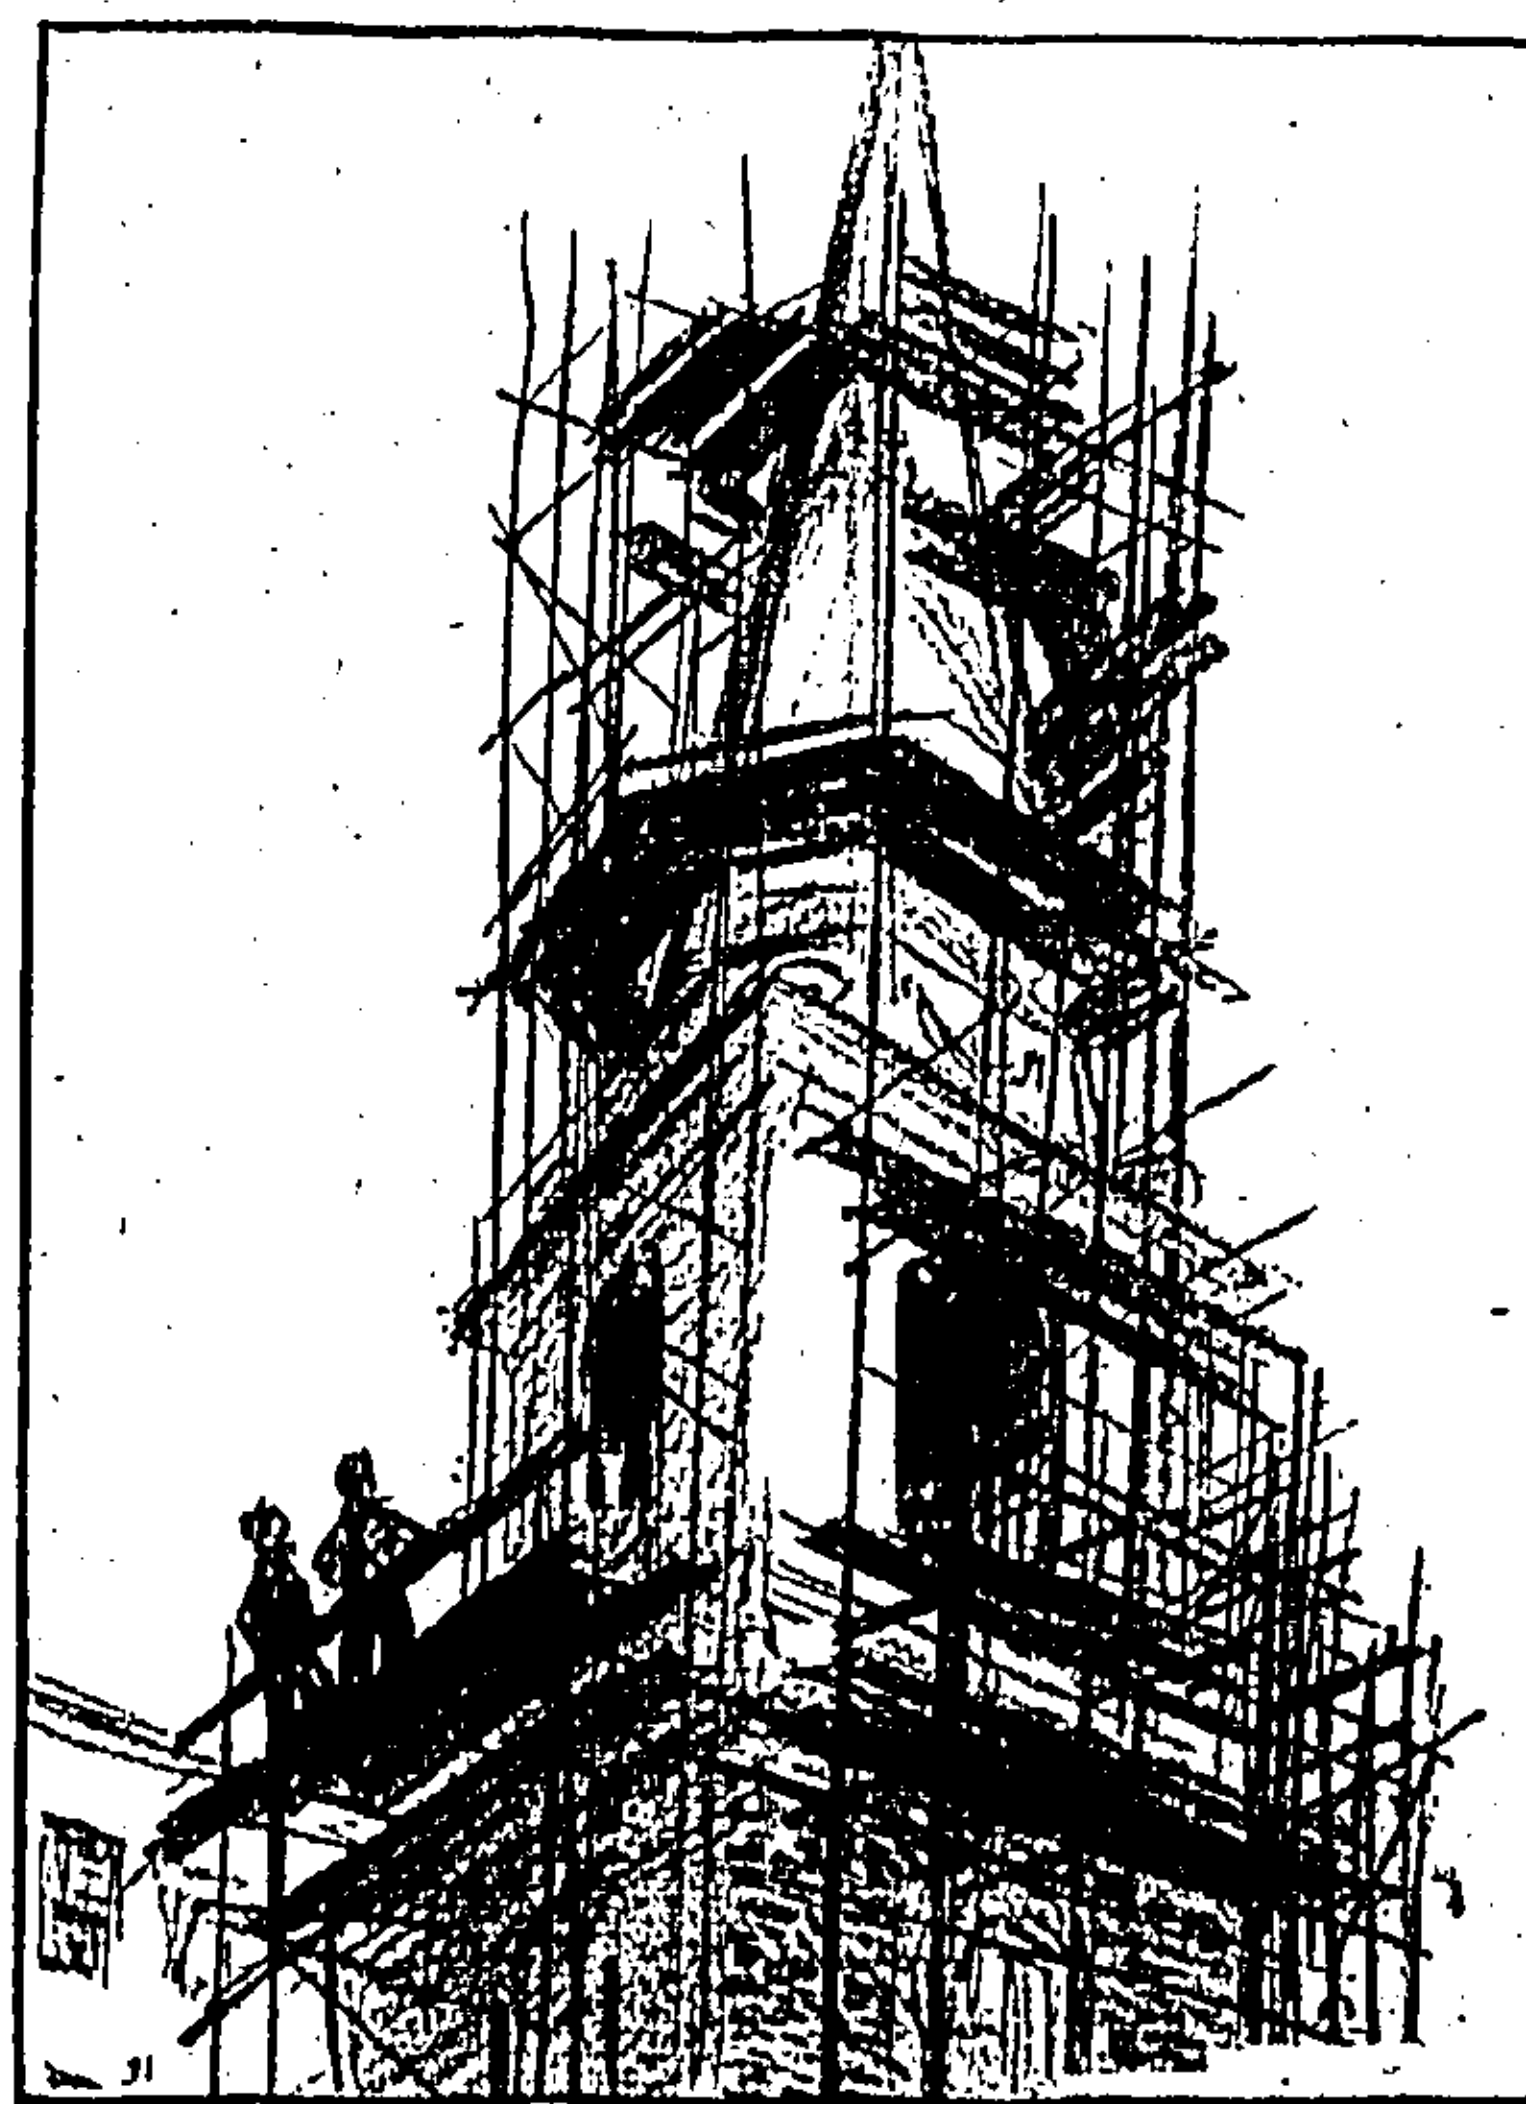

Back at our home, we will stifle a yawn, and turning to another of our valets, say, "Frederick, we want another bathing pool added to our grounds. See that the Shing Mun Dam is completed this month."

"Yesair!"

"And throw that stack of bank notes out of the window. We just saw a fly on it."

We may, when properly established, need a little assistance in this sort of thing, and applications from brokers, Government officials, tailors, and other qualified demonstrators should be lodged early together with a $100 note as proof that, to the applicant, money has no value.

A quiet wedding was solemnised in the Kowloon Union Church on Saturday afternoon, when Sergeant James Scrim, of the Hongkong Police Force, was married to Miss Elizabeth Davidson, who arrived from England on the P. and O. s.s. Carthage.

YOUNG SOLDIER'S

truder had preceded them, and on finding himself discovered, Hamilton slid down the verandah and dropped down the short height into the grounds below. As he did so, a mah jong set which he took from the house fell to the ground.

The two women were too frightened to raise an alarm, and the last seen of Hamilton was when he ran down Robinson Road. A complaint was subsequently made to the Inspector General of Police, and that night at 7 o'clock, Inspector Murphy went up to the house where he was furnished with a detailed description of the intruder. Upon his return to the charge room at the Central Police Station, he found Hamilton already in custody and finding the description to fit with the general appearance of the prisoner, taxed him with the earlier incident.

Hamilton admitted it, and, when searched, was found to have in his possession the travelling clock, crucifix and knife and fork belonging to Fr. Bourke, S.J., of the Wah Yan College.

CAR DAMAGED.

The circumstances under which Hamilton came to be arrested that evening were indicated in the third and fourth charges in respect of a private car which he commandeered that evening and subsequently damaged in attempting to drive it.

It seems that on coming down to town from his visit to the up-level district, he wandered to the City Hall, and seeing a private car parked there, he got into it and attempted to start the engine. He had progressed but a few paces before it ran into a tree, and he backed it only to collide with another car. He then abandoned the idea of driving the car, but on next seeing a Northern Telegraph messenger on his rounds, forced him off his bicycle and appropriated his machine.

RUN TO EARTH.

Hamilton rode along Queen's Road as far as Queen Victoria Street, when the hue and cry gradually growing in volume in his rear forced him again to abandon the bicycle at the top of Queen Victoria Street. He ran up Pottinger Street, and turned into Stanley Street, being then followed up a staircase by an Indian constable, who had taken up the pursuit.

Finding his escape cut off, Hamilton drew the table knife he had in his possession and menaced the Indian with it, but abandoned further resistance when a blast sounded by the Indian on his whistle brought reinforcements to the spot. He was then escorted to the charge room in the Station further up the hill.

BAD RECORD.

Second Lieut. Stevenson, Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, who was in Court in reply to a query from the Bench, said Hamilton possessed a very bad military record. Hamilton was only 19, he said, and joined the Army in November, 1929, but in spite of the short time he had been in the Army, had managed to put up a very bad record and had been in military detention several times.

His Worship inspected the records of these various offences, and remarked that although he could not take notice of military ones, he must take into consideration the other offences. For a young man Hamilton's record was very bad indeed.

BLAMES ARMY.

Hamilton:—It is not my fault; it is the Army.

Accused proceeded to make a statement which was unintelligible to the Magistrate and which had to be explained by the officer in Court as meaning that being under almost continuous detention had driven him (Hamilton) to breaking barracks and committing the offences.

His Worship, in giving his decision, sentenced Hamilton to three months' hard labour for the theft of the mah jong set.

On the charge of driving Mr. Rouillon's car without the permission of the owner, Hamilton was fined $25 or three weeks; and on the charge of lacking a driver's licence he was further fined $10.

DEATH SECRET
OF FUNERALGoring Heath (Oxfordshire), Sept. 7.

The simple funeral of Lord Sudeley at Woking to-day was the first intimation of his death, which took place last Monday. He was 62 years of age.

It was in accordance with Lord Sudeley's expressed directions that no announcement of his death was made until the day of his funeral.

Lord Sudeley gave instructions that only his legal adviser should be present; that the body should be cremated and that there should be no service and no flowers.

These instructions were carried out.

Only Mrs. Eric Kennington—Sudeley's former wife, and now the wife of Mr. Eric Kennington, the famous sculptor and artist—and his solicitor were with Lord Sudeley when he died at his house, Homer, Ipsden, Wallingford Berks.

"A Great Man."

"Lord Sudeley disliked any outward sign of show or publicity," said Mr. Kennington.

"He was generous and kindly to everyone with whom he came in contact."

"There was nothing mysterious about him; he had his own circle of friends and frequently entertained some of them at his house, Homer. He travelled to town frequently and attended to work at Dr. Barnardo's and various companies with which he had associations."

Mr. Kennington told me that Lord Sudeley ran a farm at the back of his house solely to keep it going with the few hands whose livelihood depended upon him.

"My wife always retained her affection for Lord Sudeley," he added.

I visited the luxurious flint-stone mansion at Ipsden in which Lord Sudeley died. It is furnished with antiques and in the lounge hall is a large cage built into the wall where he kept his budgerigars (love birds), of which he was a keen breeder.

The house is an ideal country home and is several miles from any other habitation.

Nephew as Heir.

Having no children, Lord Sudeley's heir is his nephew, Mr. Richard Algernon Frederick Hanbury-Tracy.

Lord Sudeley travelled extensively during his early years, and after his return he married in 1905 Edith Celandine, daughter of the late Lord Francis Cecil, second son of the 3rd Marquis of Exeter.

They were divorced in 1922, and his wife afterwards married Mr. Eric Kennington.

CHRISTENSEN

In the estate of Mr. Tam Sie, retired merchant, of Owen Street, Innisfail, North Queensland, Australia, who died on the 20th October, 1931, probate has been granted to Mr. Tam Lim, trader, of 14, Koon Ma Terrace, Hongkong. The value of the local estate is $117,700.

The late Mr. Jens Peter Christensen, cement-burner, formerly of 3, Kimberley Villas, Kowloon, left estate valued at $26,800. In his will he named Engelhardt Christensen, his son, sole executor to his estate in Hongkong, and Engelhardt Christensen, his daughter, Helga Christensen, and his son, Ooi Christensen, executors of such part of his estate now in the Kingdom of Denmark. He left 25,000 kroner to his wife as well as various building and hereditaments in Denmark, and to his grandson, Harold Peter Gerard Christensen, the sum 1,000 kroner. His real and personal property in Victoria he left to his son, the executor in Hongkong. Probate has been granted to Engelhardt Christensen.

LASHESNOVEL LANTERN SHOW AT
THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

ALCHEMY &amp; THE ATOM

Girls who pluck their eyebrows and curl their eyelashes in imitation of the beautiful ladies of the screen will receive a shock to discover what science has to say on the matter.

According to Professor V. Suk, a Czechoslovakian scientist, of the University of Masaryk, Brno, this method of attaining a film face is also practised by monkeys.

Professor Suk gave members of the British Association at York a series of typical film faces to illustrate his researches in the new science of eyebrows and eyelashes.

His chief lantern slide was a charming picture of the Continental film star Anny Ondra, who has appeared in British pictures.

Negroes and Mongols.

Film stars, he said, had anticipated the researches of science in the way of artificial make-up by some years. Negroes and Mongols had done the same thing as film stars to give them a youthful appearance, and

"We have a shrewd suspicion that monkeys do the same thing." Experiments showed, said Professor Suk, that in babies eyebrows were almost straight and eyelashes turned up. As people grew older the eyebrows curved and the eyelashes straightened.

That "Baby" Like Appearance.

"What film stars have done without realising its scientific meaning," he added, "is to revert to a baby-like appearance. They have straightened their eyebrows, which curved with age, and turned up their eyelashes again."

Eyebrows and eyelashes were definitely hereditary. Whatever the colour of the eyes or hair of one's father or mother, the eyebrows would definitely conform to the colour of one or other of them. In 600 observations it was found that dark eyebrows and eyelashes were predominant whatever the colour of the hair on the head. Eyebrows to Electrons.

From eyebrows the scientists passed to the study of electrons and the alchemist's dream of transmuting base metals into gold.

The transmutation of elements has now been accomplished, it was stated, and scientists are satisfied that ere long gold will be produced in the laboratory.

But at present the cost of transmutation is so enormous and the results so small that there are no practical or commercial possibilities so far.

The Duke, who is working on similar lines to the experiments at the Cavendish Laboratory, said: "When we can explode many electrons together, then the alchemist's dream comes true. Anything in the world can then be turned into anything else—gold, or what you will."

"It is a terrifying possibility, and I cannot help feeling relieved that it will need many years of hard work before it comes true."

How to Cure Seasickness.

Why are we seasick and airsick? Dr. F. Gwynne Maitland described scientific experiments in the production of vertigo.

In a talk after his paper, Dr. Maitland, who is medical superintendent of the Cunard Line, told the News-Chronicle that exercise was one way of avoiding seasickness—whether you did it by playing a game, or reading, or standing in the prow of the ship your eye fixed on a distant place.

Scene III.

Enter one of Messrs. Bravington's salesmen, at the invitation of "Dr. Graham," whom he met standing outside beside a luxury car. Tea served from silver tea service while the "doctor" examines the watches and casually asks whether smash-and-grab raiders have caused the firm any losses.

SYMPHONYWOMAN AMAZES
SCIENTISTS

A woman bought an ice-cream block from a street vendor. She noticed that when he placed ice against his bicycle bell the bell rang.

In such a way are scientific discoveries made. The woman happened to be Miss Mary D. Waller, lecturer in physics at the London School of Medicine for Women.

[Carbon dioxide is used in the artificial preparation of ice.]

Frozen Music

Around Miss Waller was an assortment of articles such as a silver cake-stand, tuning forks, brass rods. Placed against one metal block of carbon-dioxide made a noise something like the wailing of a child.

Against the cake-stand it emitted a low base obbligato.

Against another metal a crystal clear sound was produced.

The explanation of the phenomenon, Miss Waller said, appeared to be that the forces of energy causing the vibrations were produced by the heat of the metal coming into contact with the carbon-dioxide. Steel, brass and silver were the most satisfactory for producing musical sounds.

Inflation Remedy

Professor J. R. Bellerby, a one-armed scientist, advocated to the Economic Science section that the Bank of England should make a new issue of notes free and hand them over to trade. He also suggested a 10 per cent. increase in all State benefits—unemployment, pensions and health allowances.

His remedy for the industrial world's ills is inflation. He said: "The one hope of recovery is something in the nature of a rise of 30 per cent. in wholesale prices in the next two years." There could be no question of repaying the Bank the money given.

Unemployment limited the purchasing power of the people.

"Purchasing power," Professor Bellerby concluded, "we can have at any time, in any quantity, and vast bodies of people are craving to spend. Where, then, is the difficulty?"

LONDON GIRL DANCER

TO PAY £350

IN LIEU OF THREE MONTHS
IN PRISON

Berlin, Aug. 25.

Marianne Winckelstern, the dancer, who had flown from London, where she is appearing in "Casanova" at the Coliseum, was convicted on a homicide charge to-day and sentenced to three months' imprisonment, the sentence to be remitted on payment of 5,000 marks (about £350) as compensation.

She is expected to return to London at once.

Miss Winckelstern was driving her car to the Scala Theatre, where she was appearing, on March 16, when she ran over and fatally injured a man named Rudloff. At the inquest she was exonerated from blame, but the Public Prosecutor instituted proceedings against her for manslaughter, alleging culpable negligence.

She wept when evidence was given by the victim's widow.

MAMAK HOCKEY
DAY OF PROLIFIC SCORING 26 GOALS IN
SAINTS ON TOP

Prolific scoring was the order of the day in the Mamak Tournament games yesterday, and in the three matches played no fewer than twenty-six goals were netted. Two teams, the Radio, opposed to the German Club, and St. Andrew's playing the R.E., netted eight times each and thus have the honour of sharing the laurels for the highest score in the league. Against the Tamar the Signals scored seven times.

Yesterday's win by St. Andrew's placed them at the head of the table with the analysis of: Played three, won three, lost nil, drawn nil, 17 goals for, four against six points.

(By "Bully-Off").

By defeating the R.E.s by eight goals to nil at Sookunpoo yesterday St. Andrew's not only maintained their unbeaten record in the Mamak Tournament but with the Radio registered the highest score to date in the competition.

The Club played well throughout but missed many opportunities in front of goal, the chief defaulter being Guest despite the fact that he was responsible for netting seven of the total.

They kept the Army men continually on the defensive and found little resistance when they came within striking distance. Some fine work was done in the centre of the intermediate line by Hamson who frustrated many of the attempts of the Engineers to push their way into the Club's territory. What little they had to do at back, F. Wong and White accomplished admirably, while R. H. Wong in goal was tested twice only. The forwards combined well and with short neat passing movements were able to get through the defence time and time again. None of the forwards were really brilliant and had they been faced with a stronger defence would have had a different tale to tell.

The play of the R.E.s was very scrappy and their passing far from accurate. The backs were inclined to keep too far back and when pressed were unable to get the ball away to the forwards. There were no outstanding exponents of the game although Higgins and Harding shone occasionally. The soldiers were very lucky to register any score at all and had it not been for a misunderstanding on the part of Hamson, and the brothers Wong, the Saints' defence would have finished with a clean sheet.

From the initial bully the Club exerted pressure and for a time their efforts met with a stubborn resistance. The Engineers gradually gave way under the bombardment and after about ten minutes Guest opened the scoring for St. Andrew's. They went away again from the bully and Fincher, on the left, sent across a nice centre which struck the upright. In subsequent play the R.E.'s keeper ran out to take the ball from Gilchrist but missed and as the ball trickled to the line Harding just managed to clear as he fell to the ground. Fincher had hard lines again—a few minutes later when another of his centres struck the post, but before the interval Guest snapped on to one of his passes and increased the lead.

GUEST CARRIES ON.

In the second half the Club met with little opposition and netted six times. Guest added five and the other was scored by Mackay who was playing at right inner. Leslie scored the only goal for the R.E. following a hard hit down the field by Harding. Three of the Club players chased the ball and each waited for the other to hit it. In the meantime Leslie came on the scene and tapped the ball into the net.

The teams were:
St. Andrew's: R. H. Wong; E. H. P. White and F. Wong; S. McNider; B. Hamson and E. McNider; F. Broadbridge, N. A. E. Mackay, A. E. P. Guest, J. T. K. Gilchrist and E. F. Fincher.
R.E.: J. Bailey; L. C. Higgins and B. Harding; Waldron, Collins and Cassey; Leslie, Q. M. S. Hayden, Hinbury, Holmes and Pegg.

DOUBLE 10TH INFLUENCE

CHINESE DISPLAY HOLIDAY SPIRIT IN EXHIBITION SOCCER MATCH

HONGKONG F. A. TROUNCED 5-1

(By "VERITAS".)

Chinese A.A.F. 5
(Ip Pak-wa 2, Wong Mee-shun, Tam Kong-pak, Li Shai-yau)
Hongkong F.A. 1
(Dominy)

NANKING had said that the Double Tenth was to be observed quietly, but the Chinese Athletic Federation football team slyly winked at this yesterday afternoon and proceeded to boisterously celebrate the event by trouncing the Hongkong Football Association eleven to the tune of 5-1.

The Chinese players displayed a real holiday spirit and played such perfect football as to leave the Association men wondering why such representative games were ever arranged seeing all they entailed was fruitless chasing after wizards who playfully toyed with a leather sphere to one's huge discomfort and an adverse goal balance at the end of it all.

This may suggest that yesterday's game on the Club ground was nothing but a farce, which is far from the case. But there was never any doubting the pronounced superiority of the Chinese, a superiority which became more and more evident as the game proceeded.

It has been said that South China will not be the same team without the guiding spirit of Lee Wai-tong. Well that spirit was absent from the Chinese team yesterday, but it can't be said that it either benefitted the Association eleven or depressed their

GREAT TEAM WORK.

This was entirely due to the magnificent team work displayed by the Federation. Perfect positioning by the backs, object-less football by the halves and crisp passing and devastating shooting by the forwards combined in providing the large crowd of spectators with soccer of the highest order.

As individuals the match was a triumph of a brainy, text-book football on the part of Ip Pak-wa (operating at inside left) and CUSTOMERSHIP—Rodgers, the Hongkong F.A. goalkeeper, was in splendid form yesterday, repeatedly saving his citadel against the Chinese. Here is here seen effecting a typical clearance.

Wong Mee-shun (inside right). These two caused more trouble and anxiety to the Association defence than the whole of another forward line put together. And it was not surprising that Strange, Martin and Rodgers cracked under the severe strain. Ip and Wong not only opened up the game with long passes which made the work of the wingmen mere child's play, but they scored the goals and each one the result of a definite scheme which generally saw the first light of day somewhere on the half way line.

UNCOMPROMISING MOOD.

In addition to this the Chinese half backs were in a most uncompromising mood, and completely subjected the Association forwards until there was scarcely any opposition attack.

Leung Yu-chiu and Lau Mau were a pair of safe backs, though they were only sorely pressed during first half intervals and from these they emerged with their colours flying.

The Association representatives, though always inferior in the finer points of the game, and finally played to a standstill, were spirited enough until the second half which saw an amazing debacle. But there was a half back weakness, particularly in the pivotal position which not only left the defence as an undernourished victim to the virulent Chinese vanguard, but made the work of the Association forwards doubly difficult and half as effective.

RODGERS GALLANT.

Bias of Kowloon was the only half back to play anything like a game worthy of the occasion. Channing was mediocre, whereas Stevens, also of the Police was definitely outclassed. The work thrust upon Strange, Martin and Rodgers was therefore more than they could cope with, although Rodgers played magnificently in the first half and it was almost entirely thanks to him that the teams crossed over on level terms. He made two blunders in the closing stages when goals were scored, though they were of a tactical nature.

Up among the forwards Leonard operating on the left wing gave the most consistent account, and was never fully subdued by the Chinese defenders. He was as good as any of them in the matter of speed, used his feet well and centred with unfailing regularity. Bryant of the R.A. was never effective and appeared to assume an inferiority complex, probably a reaction to his experience with South China last Saturday.

NEGLECTED GOSANO.

Howe was slow and indecisive as a leader, and was only occasionally in a position which held any danger to the Chinese. He was carefully watched and eventually resigned himself to the policeman-like attentions of his opponents.

Dominy worked with a will and in the initial stages of the game accomplished some excellent constructive work. His thrustfulness kept his markers on the alert, but he too faded away when he found there was no support forthcoming from his intermediates.

B. Gosano on the wing was neglected, never being given a fair chance even to show his powers. The persistency with which the ball was kept away from him was one of the chief reasons why the Association did not score more than one goal.

The match was full of incident, the early exchanges favouring the Chinese in midfield, but near goal the Association were equally as dangerous. Dominy was conspicuous for some forceful movements, but it was left to the Chinese to open the scoring, Wong Mee-shun concluding a beautiful movement by netting with a glorious left foot drive.

THE EQUALISER.

The state of the game quickly changed. The Association set up a series of determined attacks, and Howe, obviously on his way to scoring was tripped in the penalty area. Dominy made no mistake from the spotkick.

The scores stood thus at half time, and quite a fair reflection of the game, despite the Chinese superiority in finesse.

But after the change-over, the Association collapsed and the Federation scored at will. Ip Pak-wa, twice threatening his way through a crowd of players netted with nice finishing shots, and Tam Kong-pak and Li Shai-yau rounded off dazzling movements to score the others.

Teams:

H.K.F.A.—G. Rodger; Martin, S. Strange; Channing; Stephens, Bliss; B. Gosano, Bryant, Howe, Dominy, D. Leonard.

H.K.C.A.F.—Lui Tin-chai; Leung Yu-chiu, Lau Mau; Li Kwok-chiu, Leung Wing-chiu, Tong Kwan; Cheung Lin-hay, Wong Mee-shun, Tam Kong-pak, Ip Pak-wa, Li Shai-yau.

YESTERDAY'S FOOTBALL MATCH

Lee Wai-tong Lost to Local Football

SOUTH CHINA'S BRILLIANT PLAYER
LEAVES FOR JAVA

Lee Wai-tong, the brilliant South China inside left, and one of the cleverest footballers the Colony has ever produced, is lost to local soccer by his departure on Sunday evening for Java to take up a business appointment. It is not expected that Lee will give up football, as there are several football clubs of good standing in Java.

Lee played his final game for South China on Saturday, when he helped his team to victory against the Royal Artillery. The secret of his amazing football is superb ball control and a complete knowledge of the finer points of the game. He never allows himself to become flustered or flustered off the ball, and his understanding with Ip Pak-wa was such as to make their most formidable combination in local soccer.

A GENIUS.

The inside left, who has a huge goal-scoring list to his credit, started his football as a junior with South China in 1922. Three years later he left for Shanghai and joined the Lung Hwa Club. He returned to his old love in 1930 and has played regularly for them since then.

His genius at football quickly placed him in the Interport class and during the past nine years he has played for both Hongkong and Shanghai in these representative matches.

TENNIS ALSO.

Lee is also a tennis player of no mean ability and had he attached himself more seriously to the game could easily have developed into one of the Colony's leading players. He was particularly useful as a doubles player and last year, in company with Luk Ding-cheung reached the fourth round of the Open Doubles. They fell to Ho Ka-lau and Yew Man-kit only after a match which went the full distance and ran to 27 games.

IP PAK-WA AS SUCCESSOR.

This morning Mr. Mok Hing, the Hon. Secretary of the South China Club said that it was more than probable that Ip Pak-wa, who previously operated on the left wing with Lee, would, especially in view of his performance yesterday, be transferred to the inside left position, but he could not say who would partner him on the wing.

VOLUNTEERS SECOND VICTORY.

H. K. C. C. LATEST VICTIMS

The match between the Hongkong Cricket Club and the Volunteers, which was resumed yesterday morning, ended in a win for the Volunteers by four wickets.

The Volunteers were dismissed in their first innings for 180 runs, which was the same total compiled by the Club on Saturday. Richardson (33), Rido (28), Griffiths (25) and Kilbee (35) being the chief scorers. In their second essay, the Club were all dismissed for 153 runs, out of which Duckitt claimed 43 not out and Reid 28 runs. Beck took five wickets for 34 runs. Griffiths was in magnificent form for the Volunteers in their second innings, and scored 60 runs before he was caught off Smith. Rido added 47 to the total of 155 for six wickets, giving the side the victory by four wickets.

K. C. C. RESULT

Keen cricket saw the finish of the club match between Fincher's and Goodwin's teams at the K.C.C., yesterday, the sub-captain's eleven winning by 34 runs with a wicket in hand.

The feature of the second day's play was the stylish batting of E.C. Fincher, who hit up 73 in his team's final innings before retiring. Afterwards Perry and Burnett carried on the good work and completely subdued the attack. E. F. Fincher scored brilliantly for Goodwin's team in their second innings his 71 being made out of a total of 149. Burnett was the most successful bowler of the day capturing 6 wickets for 61 runs.

RADIO SCORE EIGHT.

The Radio Sports Club made their first appearance in the Mamak Tournament at Carroll Hill yesterday when they were opposed to the German Club. Although they did not display their usual form they were too good for their opponents, winning comfortably by eight goals to nil. The Radio had a four goal lead at the interval, the scorers being Harbhajan Singh (2) and Gur-bachan Singh (2). After the interval goals were added by Gur-bachan Singh and Awar Singh.

Throughout the Radio showed a better knowledge of the finer points and they combined well. In front of goal they made the most of the opportunities afforded them, but found stubborn resistance in the goal-keeping of Ammann. The German Club, on the other hand, were slow to seize chances and their passing was far from good. Except for an occasional break into the Radio territory they were kept continually on the defensive.

BRILLIANT RECOVERY.

The Signals, in their game with H.M.S. Tamar on the Navy Ground, King's Park yesterday, made a brilliant recovery in the second half after being even at the interval and won by 7 goals to two.

Within five minutes of the bully-off Comby gave the Signals the lead, and almost immediately Tetley replied for the Navy men. Witeway Wilkinson gave the Corps the lead again but before the interval Tetley again brought the scores level.

The second half saw a decided change in the run of play. The Signals completely dominated the play, although on several occasions the Tamar broke away and came dangerously near to scoring. Receiving a pass from Chaffey, Wilkinson gave the Corps the lead and soon after wards Chaffey netted their fourth, from close range. Before the end Wilkinson made himself responsible for meeting twice and Convey scored once.

Messrs. E. A. Pierce & Co. report:—The market is in new low ground for the current reaction, with evidence of positive support lacking. We think it the best policy to go back to the idea of staying on the side-lines, both for the trader and the investor who is considering purchases. Business done: 2,300,000 shares.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

Monthly Competition of the Local Club.

The October monthly shoot of the Hongkong Rifle Club was held on the Kowloon Tong Range over the weekend. Twenty members competed in the various classes. The shooting was more difficult owing to the fact that now targets have been made to conform with the Blaisey measurements.

At 200 yards the aiming mark is twelve inches and the "bull" five inches in diameter. The scoring on Saturday afternoon was considerably higher than on Sunday. There was competition in Class "A" owing to the fact that only two members competed in this class. The following were the best scores:

Class "A" 200 yds. 300 yds. 400 yds. Total

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The noisient comedy scene ever recorded at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios took place during filming of "The Passionate Plumber" in which Buster Keaton, Jimmy "Shnozzie" Durante and Polly Moran will be seen shortly at the Queen's Theatre. The climax of this hilarious farce in which the entire cast is involved required more than half a ton of "breakaway" stucco, made of a very light plaster composition, and dishes to be thrown. The first time this scene was attempted, the sound technicians kept their controls adjusted at the normal setting. Buster Keaton seized a large statue and threw it across the sound-stage where it crashed against a post. "Crunch!" went the plaster. "Crunch!" cried the technicians. A light valve had blown out. The remainder of the cast, including Irene Purcell, Gilbert Roland and George Meade, were instructed to hold their breath and a specially strong light valve could be put in. "Now fire away!" called Director Edward Sedwick. Everyone heaved croakery in all directions. Perspiration stood out on the brow of the dials and mixer as he watched the one side to another. His hand ached from changing the volume control to relieve the strain on the light valve. After almost five minutes of this terrific racket the scene ended. "The show," exclaimed Sedwick. "It's a lucky thing for us. We couldn't retake this scene for every 'break-away' in the studio has been demolished."

"The Rainbow Trail." "The Rainbow Trail," Fox Western drama, based on Zane Grey's popular novel of the same name which is showing to-day at the King's Theatre has a cast of many favourites. In the leading role, that of a lonely cowboy who attempts to rescue a single handed, three persons from a hidden and impenetrable valley, is George O'Brien, the actor's own choice to impersonate his vivid characters on the screen. He has already played in the eminent author's "Last of the Duanes" and "Riders of the Purple Sage." Another popular player is Roscoe Ates, whose stuttering tongue is a classic of the screen. Likewise, J. M. Kerrigan, who has played "Song of My Heart," "Lightning," "The Black Camel" and "Merely Mary Ann," and James Kirkwood whose successes in both silent and talking pictures are by far too many to enumerate. Among the feminine players are Cecilia Parker, who plays opposite O'Brien. While this is Miss Parker's first picture, she is receiving the plaudits of both critics and fans who have already seen the picture. A prominent role is also enacted by Minnie Gombell.

"Delicious." Janet Gaynor, whose latest production, "Delicious," showing to-day at the Oriental Theatre, proves again that she is the exception to the "luxury and wealth" rule of the movies. In this picture, in which she is co-starred with Charles Farrell, she is again most appealing as the pathetic little figure surrounded by poverty and squalor through which her innate goodness and charm shine brightly. The story of "Delicious" is consistent with this characteristic of Miss Gaynor except that her occupation is a little more than ordinarily unusual. She is, of all professions, a marmalade girl. Or was, before embarking in the steepest of a giant liner to sail for America to find home with an uncle in Idaho. Charles Farrell as a handsome young sportsman and polo player returning from Europe with his string of ponies, makes the acquaintance of Janet one day while he is down in the hold working with his horses. Janet thinks he is a groom, and tells him all about her experiences in a Scotch marmalade factory. Her job, according to the story she tells the amazed young millionaire, was that of sticking water-proof paper on the tops of marmalade jars, a prosaic enough calling even for the movies.

"Hell Divers." Regina Crowe of The American, writes: It appears that Wallace Beery has become a long-term tenant of the Astar Theatre. For though "The Champ" has passed out through its portals, Beery is the star of its worthy successor, "Hell Divers," a vivid epic of the air distinguished by some of the most remarkable features yet presented in a photoplay. The picture is a frank glorification of naval aviation, produced with the fine co-operation of the Navy. Its skies are full of planes soaring in battle formations, stunting dangerously, plunging earthward with the sudden swoop of the hell-diver from which the film takes its name. There are shots, splendidly impressive and memorable for supreme photographic beauty, of dirigibles sailing through lofty cloud banks. And as a background for the more intimate action there is the plane carrier, U.S.S. Saratoga, to which the wandering fliers return, like chicks to a mother hen. While there are the most important items of the picture, there is no denying the potency of Wallace Beery's portrayal as a chief petty officer of the squadron. He is relied upon for the humour as well as the pathos of the picture, and he supplies both in liberal quantity from his large store.

MODEST RESCUER.

CHINESE SEAMAN'S DIVE
FROM FERRY

After he had rescued a man from drowning in the harbour yesterday, Leung Kam, a seaman on the ice boat, Oriental, modestly retired from the limelight and did all in his power to throw off the mantle of a hero which was being placed on his unwilling shoulders. When the Hongkong-Mongkok ferry was in mid-harbour, Yau Kon-hoi, 38, jumped from the deck in an attempt to commit suicide. He sank immediately but the incident was noticed by Leung Kam on the Oriental. Without hesitation he dived into the water and in a few minutes secured his man. Police Launch Number Nine, in charge of Sergeant F. Roberts was cruising in the vicinity at the time and quickly came to the rescue. Two lifebelts were thrown into the water and rescued and rescuer were dragged to safety.

Yau Kon-hoi was unconscious and was taken immediately to the Kowloon Hospital where he recovered. He is now progressing satisfactorily. Leung asked to be allowed to continue with his work and was diffident about making any statement of his own actions. Letters written by Yau, found on the ferry, indicated his intention to "end everything" by jumping in the harbour.

SCHOOL CELEBRATES.

WAH TAI COLLEGE STAGES
AN ENTERTAINMENT

Some 300 pupils of Wah Tai College and their relatives and friends celebrated the Double Tenth at the Hotel Cecil yesterday afternoon, with a programme of programme of music, conjuring, physical exercises and play-acting. The main dining room was festooned with flags and bunting, a stage improvised at one end held the attention for over two hours as the students combined to give an entertainment of considerable merit.

The proceedings were ushered in with a number of speeches welcoming the visitors, and emphasising the significance of the anniversary, also urging the cultivation of those national traits demanded by a modernized China.

Chinese music was rendered by a quartette of students, following which exhibitions were given of kung-fu and ju-jitsu. Two plays were also performed, one of them a Chinese sketch, this bringing the proceedings to a close.

Mr. Wong Ying-yat was chairman, and among those present was Mr. Liu Sun-ii, Headmaster.

Afterwards the large gathering present were entertained to tea.

Those who contributed items were Messrs. K. Y. Fan, C. L. Yuen, C. H. Chow, K. P. Yee and W. Poon.

CHURCH & PUBLICANS' WIVES

MEMBERSHIP BAN

North Wales Calvinistic Methodists at Carnarvon, adopted a report by a special committee, which submitted that the Church had the right to refuse membership to licensees' wives if the latter are engaged in the liquor trade.

The question was brought to a head by the refusal of a Carnarvonshire minister to accept transfer of membership from an Anglican church of the wife of a man who had taken over the licence of a public-house in Carnarvonshire.

The committee, which was appointed to consider the matter, submitted that there was a rule which did not allow the membership of any person who carried on the trade, and expressed the opinion that this included the wife if she took any part in the business.

Hotels and Stations.

A suggestion was made by the Rev. John Hughes (Bangor) that the Committee, by including reference to a licensee's wife, had interpolated something which was not in the rule quoted by them.

"If the rule is applicable to the wife, what about the licensee's servants?" he asked.

The Rev. T. E. Davis, a member of the Committee, replied that where a wife took part in the business, it must be assumed that she also had entered the trade.

A question as to the position of hotels was put by Principal Phillips.

"Many of you are putting up this week at hotels," he said. "What about the sale of drink at railway stations, and what about railway shareholders?"

The Rev. A. Johns (Liverpool) emphasised the fact that the committee had adhered to its terms of reference, which concerned only the licensee and his wife.

As stated, the report was adopted.

CHRISTIANITY AND COMMUNISM.

DR. E. L. ALLEN'S SERMON AT KOWLOON.

Preaching on "Christianity and Communism" in the Kowloon Union Church on Sunday, the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen said:

Communism to-day is nothing less than a new world-religion.
It is the most convinced, the most determined, and the most enthusiastic of the religions of mankind. It is a revolt against the whole past, civilisation as we have made it is for it just one gigantic mistake. Human history in any real sense began when the Red Flag was run up over the Tsar's palace at Petrograd; all that went before was of a piece with the Stone Age and Cave Man, a record of ignorance and crime, greed and cruelty, culminating in the horror of the Great War.
Criticism of this kind is absolutely merciless. It sees in education only a systematic attempt of the ruling class to keep the truth from the ruled, religion has been subsidised by the rich to keep the people quiet, and patriotism is a device to prevent the workers from uniting against their real foes, the capitalists!

But now a new age is to dawn.
'After us the Deluge!' said the French aristocracy in the days of the old regime. 'After us the Millennium!' says the youth of Russia. Lenin writes: 'New methods of production, a new morality, new forms of life, new forms of heroism and revolutionary action are arising.' And Stalin says: 'We offer a new life, a life which is worth living, a life in which man will no more be bought and sold as an article of commerce, but in which the old type of humanity, in bondage to capitalism, will evolve to a new type, called to be master of nature, master of his own machines, called to possess the earth. The pre-historic period with all its abominations and terrors, its superstition and ignorance, its exploitation and oppression, its wars and crises—is at an end!'

This new movement is frankly and uncompromisingly anti-Christian. 'Religion is dope!' is its slogan. A few years ago in Russia the walls of almost every village were plastered with the words 'God and vodka are the enemies of the Five Year Plan!'

Yet it is nothing if it is not itself religious. It has its idols, for Marx and Lenin are revered as demigods. It has its Bible, with a dogma of verbal inspiration, for was not any man who questions what Marx has written?
It has its great missionary enterprise, administering huge funds and sending men out to the ends of the earth to preach its Gospel.
Communism is sure that Russia can never be saved till the whole world has shared its salvation.
There is something in it too of Old Testament prophecy. I have felt that as I have listened to a Communist orator speaking of the law of righteousness by which the world is ruled and how a nation will perish soon or late which does not care for its poor.

The Church and State.

How did this amazing phenomenon arise? Whence did this anti-Christian come? Many of us will remember the message of Tolstol to his time. He too said the Church and State were built in Russia on privilege and injustice and the neglect of the common people, he called the whole world to go back to Galilee and order its life afresh by the words which Jesus spoke in the Sermon on the Mount. That opportunity was lost: Russia and the world refused to listen to the voice of Christ speaking through the lips of Tolstol, and now they have to listen to the voice of anti-Christ speaking in Mark and Lenin.

Perhaps the question of supreme importance to-day is that of Christianity and Communism.
What attitude shall we take up to this new world-force which proclaims itself our mortal foe? I was speaking once at a meeting attended by a number of Communists and after I had finished, one of them rose and said, 'That is all very fine, but what we want to know is—when the struggle comes between the haves and the have nots, on which side shall we see you?' I answered—and it seems to me the only possible answer—'If ever, which God forbid, there should come to be armed conflict between those who have been wronged and those who have wronged them, I should be in sympathy with those who have been wronged, in so far as they seek justice. But I should beg them to find a better way than violence and hatred and the class-war. For if this world is bad enough, you will never get a better one out of propaganda and envy and the cannon's mouth!

A Swedish writer tells in one of her novels of a counterfeit image of Christ which is set up and worshipped in a Sicilian church. It works miracles, heals the sick, cures for the poor, composes village quarrels, and sets the whole population at work building a railway on Etna. But a travelling monk comes by, denounces the imposture, and would have burned the image, had it not been snatched out of his hand in the nick of time. He goes to report to the Pope what he has done, and the Pope tells him that the false Christ is the symbol of the working-class movement, anti-clerical, anti-religious, and in the hands of extremists.
'Why,' asks the Pope, did you want to burn it? Why did you not bring it to the true Christ, that it might know its Master and worship Him? When will you learn wisdom? Why do you not take this great popular movement, while it is yet like a babe wrapped up in swaddling clothes

COMPANY SAY THEY NEED THE SHIP

Following a statement by Sir Thomas Royden, a director of the Cunard Company, that "work on the new Cunarder may be resumed rather sooner than you may think," the Cunard Company issued the following statement:

"The Company has had no intimation from Sir Thomas Royden in regard to the statement attributed to him in the Press. The Company appreciates very fully the many kindly and helpful suggestions that have appeared from time to time in the Press and feel their statements largely reflect the public interest in the new ship.

"It may be reiterated the Company need the ship from every point of view and are desirous of resuming work at the earliest possible moment, bearing in mind the all-important question of finance attached to the construction of such a vessel. Immediately the Company are in a position to make any definite pronouncement the Press and the public will be at once informed."

STRUGGLE IN A CHURCH

KENSITITE EJECTED

A scene during early communion at St. Stephen's Church, Blackpool, led to Matthew Arnold Perkins, of Kirkdale, and Henry Smith Reville, of Crosswell, Nottingham, being charged at Blackpool with creating a disturbance in the church.

They were stated to belong to the Kensit Wycliffe brigade.

The Chief Constable said that during the service Perkins called out, "Blasphemy. Our Lord never said it," and Reville shouted, "In Christ's name it is blasphemy." Reville (the added) was ejected after a violent struggle.

Perkins declared it was a Roman Catholic service which had no right to be celebrated in a Protestant church.

Both men agreed to be bound over not to interfere with any religious service for twelve months.

THE GREATEST RIDDLE

SOME DAY WE MAY LEARN TO READ IT

NATURE'S LOCKED MAGAZINE

Sir Alfred Ewing, the 77-year-old President of the British Association, has been described as the Master Mind of Room 40—the mystery room of the Admiralty, where enemy messages were decoded.

But there is one code to which Sir Alfred, on his own confession, cannot find the key. It is the riddle of the atom—Nature's secret cypher, written in terms of protons, electrons, radiation.

But science, he declared, was on the eve of great discoveries in relation to the mystery of the atom. The atom, however seemingly inert, was mighty in being a magazine of energy, which, for the most part, it locked safely away.

Nursery Game.

Sir Alfred gave a fascinating picture of this highly complex structure in the terms of a nursery game—as "two sorts of blocks or bricks—the electrons, which are indivisible units of negative electricity, and the protons, which are indivisible units of positive electricity."

"It is," he said, "strangely simple, to be taken back, as it were, to the nursery floor and given just two sorts of blocks, exactly alike in each sort, and exactly the same number of each sort, with which to build the universe of material things. The blocks are unbreakable; we cannot produce them, or destroy them, or change them."

Those of the electrons which are within the nucleus (or heart of the atom) doubtless served to bind the protons together; the other electrons constituted, as it were, a voluminous envelope, or rather a series of erinolines, extending relatively far away from the centre and giving the whole atom an exceedingly open structure.

WORK INSTEAD OF RELIEF

NOVEL SCHEME

An effort is to be made by Marlborough (Wilts) Guardians Committee to arrange a scheme whereby able-bodied men in receipt of poor law relief will be provided with agricultural work, the farmer and the Committee each paying half the wages, which are not to exceed 30s. per week.

Several members of the Committee expressed the fear that the scheme might tempt farmers to dismiss their men and re-engage them on the lower terms.

Unknown Force.

We had to realise that all matter consists of the two kinds of electricity, protons and electrons, held apart, we did not know how.

Electricity we now regarded as matter's very essence—the ultimate stuff out of which every atom was built.

"If you ask: 'What is electricity?' said Sir Alfred, 'there is no answer, save that it is a thing which exists in units of two sorts, positive and negative, with a strong attraction for each other, and that in any atom you find them somehow held apart against that attraction, with a consequent storing of potential energy.'

"Why they do not flush together is a mystery—one of the many mysteries which physicists have still to solve."

A New Particle.

A notable event of the year was the strong evidence which Dr. Chadwick, of the Cavendish Laboratory, had found for the existence of what is called a neutron—a type of particle in which an electron and a proton are associated in particularly close juxtaposition.

"The engineer," added Sir Alfred, "found himself obliged to admit that no mechanical model of the atom could be expected to give an adequate picture of that strange, new world."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

We have often been told that five to five and one-half high card tricks should produce game at the most favourable contract. That is, of course, true in general, but sometimes the most favourable contract is so well concealed that even the most skilful players cannot find it.

Today's hand was played in the National Masters' Contract Pair championship by 44 of the finest players in America, and not one of the North and South pairs succeeded in reaching the proper declaration.

♠K-J-9-8-7	♠A-5
♥10-9-6	♥8-4-3
♦10-9-8-5	♦Q-5-4
♣10	♣J-8-7-6-3
♠A-10-4-2	♠A-5
♥Q-J-7	♥8-4-3
♦Q-5-4	♦Q-5-4
♣2	♣J-8-7-6-3
♠A-6-3	♠A-5
♥A-K-5-2	♥8-4-3
♦A-K-3-2	♦Q-5-4
♣A-K-9	♣J-8-7-6-3

A little analysis will show that game can be made rather easily in spades if played with North as the declarer. However, the South players were, without exception, so proud of their aces and kings that they refused to let North play the hand at spades even though he bid and re-bid that suit.

The Bidding.

South's opening bid depended largely upon the system played or on his individual preference. Most South players bid one or two hearts, although some preferred to open with one or two no trump. In every case North bid spades. South was delighted to hear the spade bid for it appeared to fill up the only weakness in his powerful no trump hand, and he carried the contract to three no trump without hesitation.

The Play.

West opened the defence of clubs and declarer won with the ace over East's jack. He now has two possible courses—he may try to establish North's spades, which seems almost impossible in view of his own doubleton, or he may play for a break in diamonds, hoping to establish the fourth card of that suit.

In either case the opponents will establish their clubs as soon as they are permitted to take the lead. If declarer elects to try for the spades and takes the double finesse of the nine spot on the second trick, he can make exactly eight tricks. North can easily take ten tricks if spades are trump, conceding only one diamond and two spade tricks to the adversaries.

HIS LAST RIDE

CHICAGO'S MOST FEARED GANG LEADER

Chicago, Oct. 10.

Frank McElrane, one of the most feared of the local gangsters who was nicknamed "The Grinning Killer" died quietly in a hospital to-day from pneumonia. His friends held an Irish wake over the body.

McElrane was credited with having invented the "One Way Ride," namely, the taking of an enemy for his last joyride in a motor car.

More than 400 gang murders are attributed to him.—Reuter's American Service.

INSULL DETAINED

CAUGHT BY POLICE IN ATHENS HOTEL.

Athens, Oct. 10.

Samuel Insull, head of the huge American bankrupt combine, who has been flitting around Europe, was detained at his hotel here to-day, soon after his arrival, at the instance of the United States Minister, who, it is understood, has asked the Police to detain Insull, pending the receipt of a request for extradition.—Reuter.

Mysterious Cable.

Chicago, Oct. 10.

The Illinois State Attorney has subpoenaed Insull's secretary with a view to ascertaining who cabled him $25,000 to Athens. The secretary admitted cabling the financier at Paris and Italy but said he had no knowledge of the remittance.

It is indicated authoritatively in Washington that whether Insull is returned to the United States or not, depends on the Greek Government, for although the United States has ratified the Greek official journal publishing the extradition treaty, the ratifications have not yet been exchanged.

The State Attorney has urged the Governor of Illinois to request the State Department to ask Greece to deport Insull to Italy where the United States Embassy has already requested the authorities to arrest him.—Reuter.

GERMAN AIRMAN FORCED DOWN.

CAPT. VON GRONAU SENDS
S.O.S. MESSAGE

Manila, Oct. 10.

An S.O.S. message has been picked up from Capt. Von Gronau, stating that he had been forced down in the Indian Ocean, north-west of Port Swettenham.—Reuter.

Rangoon, Oct. 10.

Von Gronau was forced down into rough seas off the Burma coast, 100 miles south of Moulmein, owing to a broken water-pump.

A British steamer is in touch with the disabled craft and is attempting to tow the machine.—Reuter.

The distress calls from Capt. Von Gronau were picked up at the Cape d'Agular, wireless station.

Messages were immediately sent out to all ships in the vicinity asking them to keep a look-out for the Greenland Whaler, and report immediately to the Rangoon air base if they sighted the distressed flying boat.

HUGE ELECTRICAL ENTERPRISE.

GIGANTIC BARRAGE VON
THE RUINE

London, Sept. 10.

A Paris message states that the inauguration has taken place of the vast hydro-electric work at Kembs, on the Rhine below Basel and the first section of the Alsace Canal, which will run parallel with the river.

The hydro-electric station will be finished next year and will be the most powerful in Europe, with an annual output of seven hundred million kilowatt hours, and will serve the whole of eastern France, as far as Troyes.

The construction of the power station has entailed building a huge barrage, divided into five arches each with a span of 98 feet.

The barrage, built by the State, has cost 160 million francs, and altogether some 650 millions will be spent on the enterprise.—Our Own Correspondent.

"Good morning!
How are you?"

There's little enough need to ask her that question—even so early in the morning. Rosy from her bath—eyes sparkling, radiating health vigour and vitality. She enjoys the robust health that every woman should have.

Why Should Women Suffer?

Why any more than men from aches and ills? It seems unfair that men should escape, whilst women have to submit to those health burdens which the weaker sex endure. Really there is no reason why they should. Women—like men—were intended by Nature to be healthy and enjoy life.

But so many women fail to maintain the blood stream in a healthy and plentiful condition. And they pay the penalty of neglect with those wearisome back pains, that weakness and emaciation, pallor, headaches, and depression.

Women who value health and beauty should safeguard their blood supply by means of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The plentiful rich pure blood which these pills create enable a woman to meet the peculiar demands of Nature and maintain her health and vigour at the same time.

Roland left fairly early, partly because Mr. Friar in a charming and very subtle way indicated by hints, or hints at hints that bed was the best place not only for a middle-aged man but for everybody else; and partly because, in order to orientate himself and classify his sensations, he wanted to be alone. He lived alone, and for him nothing but solitude was favourable to full reflection. Phoebe accompanied him along the endless corridor to the entrance-hall. She was gay, happy, sisterly, and she helped with his thin overcoat, taking it from the attentive hands of undecipherable Missenden.

"I shall see you to the lift," she said in imperious high spirits. "Leave the door open, Missenden, will you?"

And, walking along another endless corridor by her side, Roland perceived that for several hours he had been living in a new world. He had forgotten domesticity. His parents had been dead for years; he had no brothers; and his only sister was married to an American in Boston, which suited her. Sometimes, but not often, he accepted an invitation to lunch if it promised to be specially sparkling. He rarely dined at home. He had plenty of dinner-invitations and did not refuse them. He rarely returned hospitality, because this was not expected of him; but now and then, for the sake of his conscience, he entertained a small party in the ladies' room of his club, where the food could be eaten and the service was unimpeachable. Women enjoyed coming to his club, though they hardly ever got even a glimpse of the sacred, forbidden rooms for males. To find themselves under the famous roof flattered them and excited them. He knew a large number of people very well; he talked freely with them. But he had no home-life, none of the negligent, totally informal ease of home-life, save occasionally when Tommy arrived in Half Moon Street and they could tell each other to go to hell and things like that. His existence was formalized. The domesticity of the Friars enchanted him. True, so far as he was concerned, it was formalized, but only superficially. In essence it was quite unconventional, despite the over-elaboration of Mr. Friar's speechifying. He had talked little with Mrs. Friar, and yet he felt that he was as close to her as to any woman of his acquaintance,—perhaps closer.

As for Phoebe, she inspired him with a desire for children. He had a vision of the delicious luxury of children, his own,—luxury unique. But if he was to enjoy children as Mr. and Mrs. Friar enjoyed Phoebe, he ought already to have begun the ticklish enterprise of procreation.

"You do like daddy and mummy, don't you?" Phoebe demanded, mocking but serious, at the angle of the corridor.

"I should just think I did!" he answered.

Difficult to conceive her as a star actress, then! She was the domestic daughter, completely. He cared for actresses only as casual associates, to lark around with conversationally. As a rule they were dull companions, save when talking about the stage; when not talking about the stage they were mum, unresponsive. And their impulsiveness, their unreliability in the matter of time,—how trying! He could not imagine himself as the husband of an expensive actress, dividing her with 'her' public, and going to bed at 2 a.m. Actresses ought to marry actors, to whom the turning of night and day upside-down was a natural and necessary operation. In any other union an actress by her calling was cut off not only from the world but from her husband. But Phoebe was different. And doubtless other actresses were here and there were different. Some retired from the stage at marriage, with impassioned relief. The trouble was that the majority of them, drawn irresistibly by the sinister fascination of spot-lights and applause, went back to the stage after a few years. And what then? But Phoebe would not be among those.

They were at the lift. Phoebe put her hand over the bell, but did not ring.

"There's something I wanted to tell you," she said. He saw that she was nervous, shy.

"Yes? What now?"

"I had a funny dream about you last night."

The single word "dream" shook him, frightened him, horrified him. It had become the most terrible word in the language. He was utterly scared. His heart began to beat, and he felt a weight under his heart. He had dreamed of her. If she started to dream about him, what would be the awful result? He thought of Mr. Friar's speechifying. He had talked little with Mrs. Friar, and yet he felt that he was as close to her as to any woman of his acquaintance,—perhaps closer.

He had been a fool, a madman, a criminal, within his mind, and in his acts. He would never see Phoebe again. He had been the most reckless being ever born. He would put seas between himself and her. And she, and her parents, might think what they chose. Horrible! Fancy the engagement of the monthly nurse, the arrival of the doctor with his mysterious bag! Horror! The cold sweat of waiting, waiting... He wanted to cry out and dash away from her at that instant. But the deep instinct of self-control restrained him.

"Yes?" he repeated in a quiet voice. Did she notice that he was trembling, that his hand fluttered? He had both hands behind his back. Had he paled? Why did she not exclaim in alarm: "What's the matter with you? Whatever's the matter?"

"It was like this," she replied hesitatingly. "You took to writing, and you had a really great idea for a play, and you wrote it, and I played in it, and it was a simply terrific success. In my dream I had always been telling you that you could write."

"But I can't," he said weakly. "And I shan't try. I've never even thought of writing."

"Well," she said, "you never know. I thought I'd tell you. Rather funny, though, isn't it?"

"Very," he said.

"She pushed the lift-bell. The cube of light rose up at once, and illuminated the glass over the lift-doors. Bang! The lift-door opened. The lift-man touched his hat and smiled as pleasantly as though the interminable monotony of his task was over full of interesting surprises and fresh delirium."

"Think it over. Good night. See you soon," she said, clasping his hand suddenly.

He was enclosed within the lift. He sank.

"My God! My God!" he thought. "It's all right. But what an escape! The fright gave me me. However, it's all right. I'm all right. But he had been so perturbed."

SYMPHONIC CONCERT.

PENINSULA HOTEL FUNCTION ON SUNDAY.

Another delightful Symphonic concert was given at the Peninsula Hotel on Sunday night, and the rounds of applause bore evidence to the excellent programme.

The special feature was the performance on the xylophone by Master Sadao Iwai, the accomplished Japanese youth. His masterful renderings of "Gypsy Airs" by Saraste accompanied on the piano by his mother, Madam Iwai, "The Mocking Bird" by Stobbe with full orchestra accompaniment, and an encore number "Long, Long Ago" also with orchestral accompaniment, were a treat. Rapturous applause was accorded each item and his wonderful playing will long be remembered.

Altogether the entertainment afforded a most enjoyable evening to the large gathering present.

"I'm a bachelor," he said to himself.

"Miss Turkey" who was elected "Miss Universe" at the international beauty contest at Spa, Belgium recently.

UNFINISHED MASTERPIECE

Arnold Bennett's last long story was left unfinished, but this does not spoil its worth or readability, but rather adds a mystery value which will be found very intriguing.

THE SMALLEST LOCOMOTIVE CAN GO THROUGH A RING

London, Sept. 1. The world's smallest locomotive is 11 in. long, is driven by an electric motor weighing 1/2 oz., pulls a load of 1 1/2 oz., and will pass through an ordinary finger ring with 1/4 in. to spare.

This is one of a thousand marvels to be seen at the Model Engineering Exhibition, which opens on Thursday at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster, where grandfathers of 80 will compete with schoolboys of 13 for honours in the world of miniature engineering.

This tiny locomotive is the work of Mr. Leonard R. Beale, of Hampstead, and will appear side by side with models ranging up to 8 ft. in length.

No fewer than 6,600 hours—one's spare time for six and a half years—have been devoted by Mr. Alfred G. Woodward, of Dunstable, to making a scale model of a pair of beam pumping engines.

28 Miles Every Week To secure the exact dimensions and make his scale-drawings, Mr. Woodward's motor-cycled 28 miles once a week for two years to the factory where the original pumps were working.

Dr. J. Bradbury, formerly in practice at Brighton, can beat this. He has devoted 8,000 hours to the making of a scale model, in silver, of the famous Rocket locomotive. It is complete down to the smallest detail, and he values it at £1,000.

An international flavour is added by a model locomotive chassis from South Africa, a model train, as used on the Liverpool Manchester Railway of 1838, from Cincinnati, U.S.A., and a tiny replica of the clipper Sovereign of the Sea which comes from Champigny-sur-Marne, France.

Professional and working men of every class are contributing to this £10,000 exhibition.

"LADY NEXT DOOR" AS ADVISER

A woman doctor's comments on birth control are included in a report on maternal mortality issued by the Ministry of Health.

The comments are made by Dame Janet Campbell, Senior Medical Officer for Maternity and Child Welfare, Ministry of Health.

High maternal mortality in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in Lancashire and in Wales, is the subject of the report, which follows an inquiry for which Dame Janet was responsible. She investigated horrible conditions in some Yorkshire industrial towns.

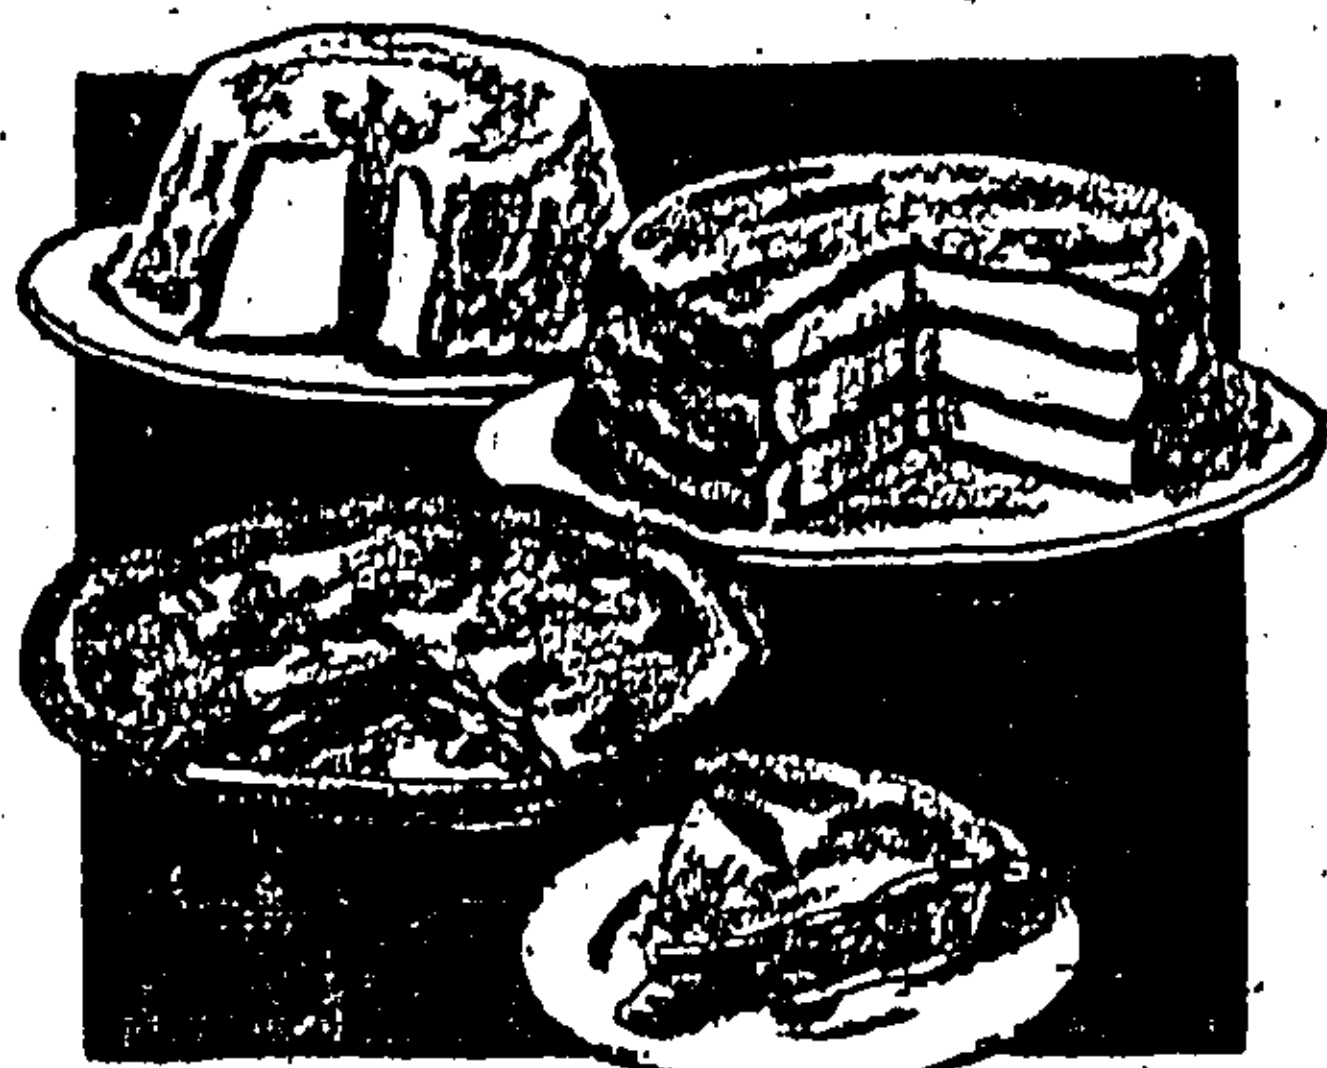

After recording suggestions that instructions in methods of birth control should be freely available for all who desire it, Dame Janet

says: "There appears to be much less public demand for contraceptive instruction than some suppose."

"Propaganda attempted by a voluntary birth control association in one of the Yorkshire towns visited was a failure."

"It does not follow that birth control is not practised. It may be that women often prefer the advice given by a companion in the mill, or by the 'lady

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

By Jonn Savoy

If you want to shine in the sports world, nothing will help you quite as much as this golden silk jersey golf dress. If your skin is bronze, the frock will be just twice as becoming; but it won't put you in the shade, even if the sun's shades haven't influenced your summer complexion.

The frock, which permits coolness and freedom, buttons down the front from the lapel neck. The sleeves are brief, and there are three tucks on the shoulder which give the fullness that is necessary without complicating the pattern of the dress. The skirt is full.

The belt, which is black and gold, marks the normal waistline and fastens with a buckle.

BEAUTY HINTS.*Putting Rouge in Its Place.

The shape of your face should determine the location of your rouge. There are no binding rules for wearing make-up. Every face has possibilities of its own.

Narrow faces will appear to have a better contour if rouge is placed around the cheek bones. Don't use too much. Keep it away from the nose.

If your face is long and oval-shaped, and your chin is pointed, your rouge also belongs away from the nose. This time it should be an even greater distance from the cheek bones. The blending movement should be directed toward the ear.

Always remember that rouge will brighten your eyes if you let the rougiest amount stay under the eyes. Don't let rouge touch the lower part of the face. It doesn't need it, and the effect is aging.

Rouge on the chin makes the face appear shorter. If you have a dimple, sometimes a touch of colour in it will deepen it, or make an effective shadow. Experiment until you see how it works. Then make your decision.

Hollows in the cheeks should not have much rouge. They will increase in depth if they do. Rouge is much more effective when applied to a smooth surface.

To Appear Young

If you want to appear young, there is a method of putting rouge under the eyes that does it. But you can't follow the popular plan of touching the dewy place under the eyes with vaseline, if you try this process.

The rouge is placed directly under the eyes. Work it up the side of your nose. It makes a half moon outward to a point that covers about three-fourths of the area under the eye. A powder which has a rose tinge should be applied on the cheeks when this method is used, as you don't want the rouge to be too startlingly different from the colour of your cheeks.

When you wear your rouge this way, use eye shadow and mascara, as they help to accentuate your eyes, and that is the purpose of this method of rouging.—BY ALICIA HART.

FASHION NOTES.*The New Tuck-In Blouses.

Some most elaborate tuck-in blouses are being worn with the new corselette-skirt. And the waistline of most of these skirts is given additional sash-belts of the same material, which is often finished by an incrustated bow at the back. Incrustations have come back with a vengeance.

Evening frocks may have incrustated bands in loose sashes. The effect is bewildering. It is almost impossible to see where a sash begins or ends. The draped waist has re-appeared also. It gives a definite slim line even to a frock in which the skirt is very wide, for skirts may be either moulded over the hips to a point which is near the knee or begin to spread widely three inches or so below the waist.

Many of the simplest models have lingerie collars and full cuffs below a loose sleeve. Net, lace, embroidered muslin, or the fine pleated chiffons are used for these, and the youthful touch is sometimes given by a neck ribbon threaded through the collar.

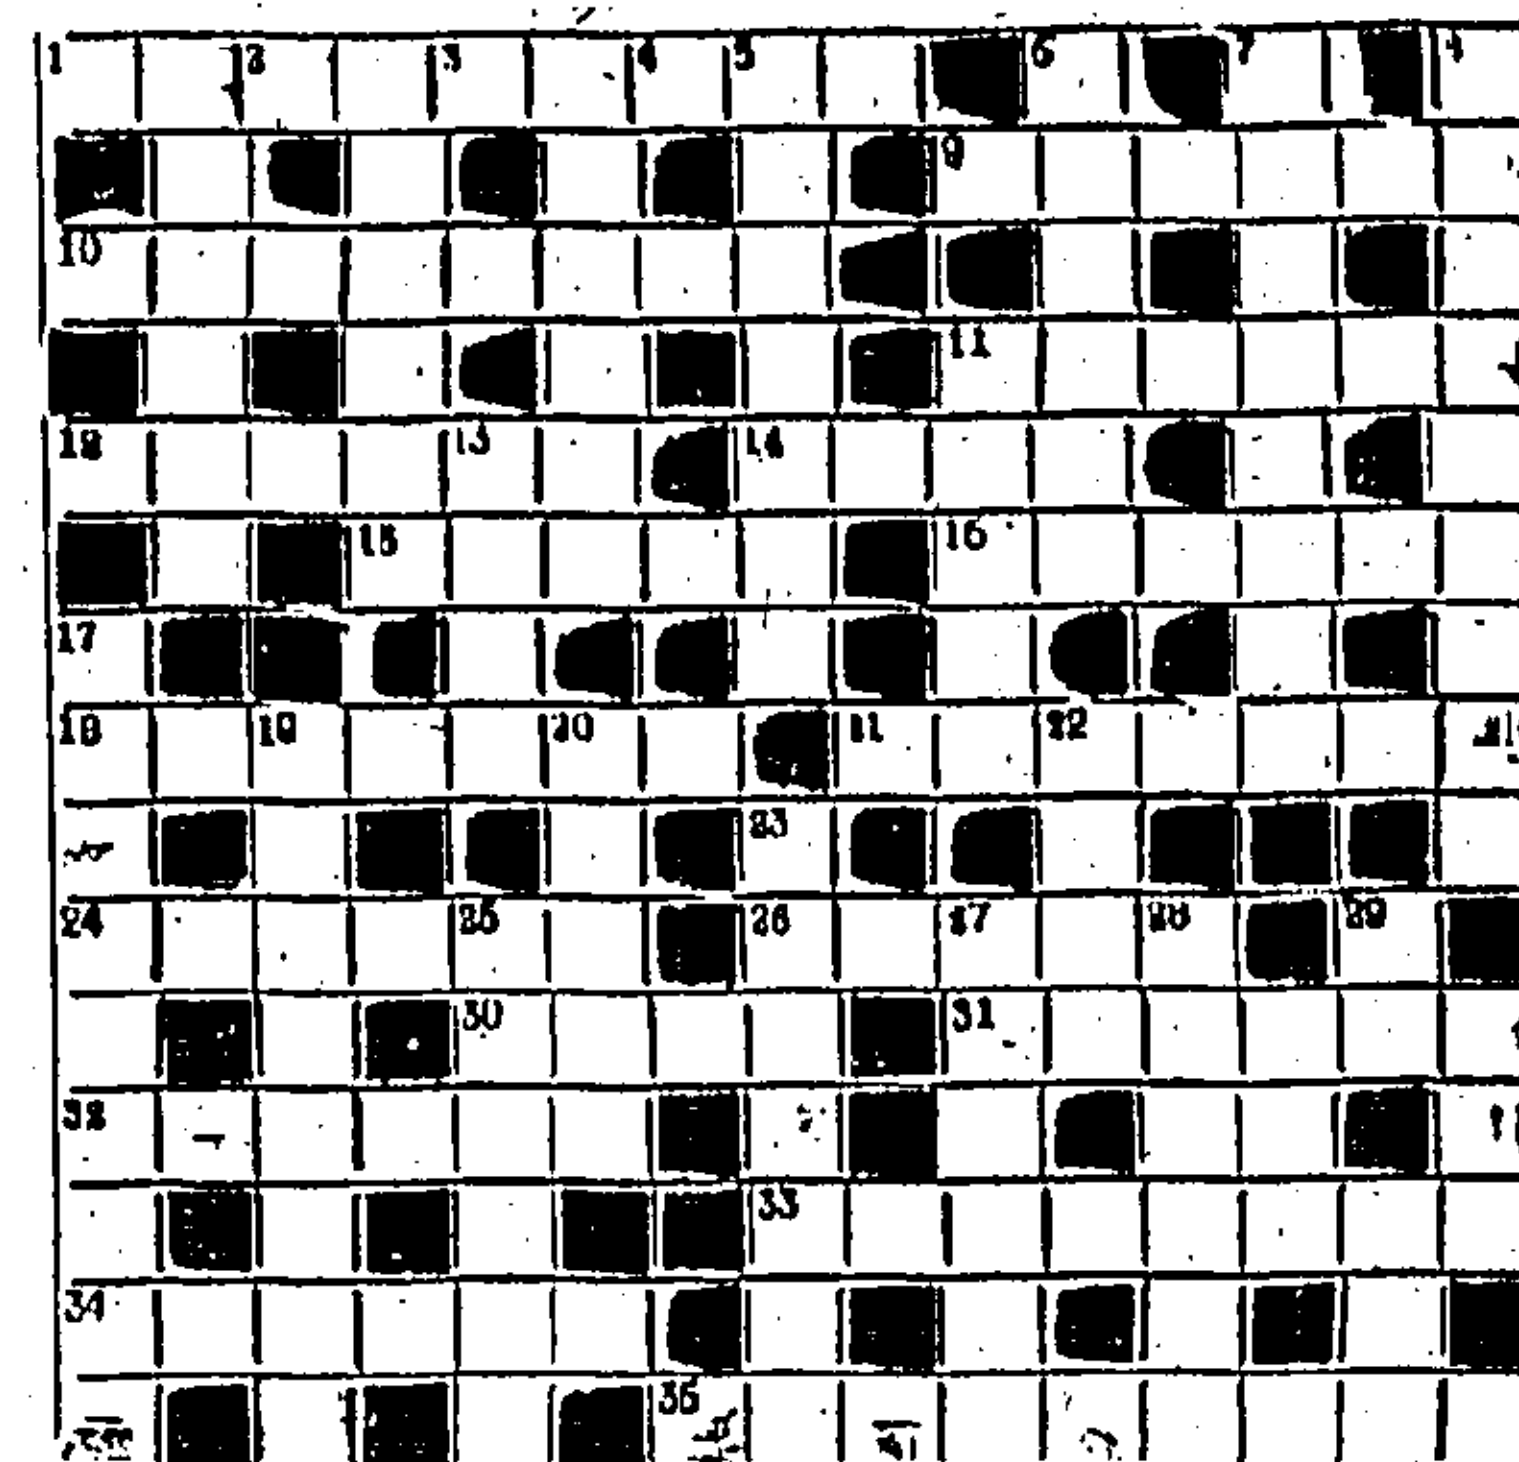

There are dozens of amusing little touches in the new fashions which appeal to women. The new gilded metal-link feather-weight epaulettes which is put on the shoulders of a tailor-suit is one. Another is a metal dog-collar which is placed across the throat and at the back of the waist of a sport frock.

There are thousands of metal buttons being used this year, as well as some beautiful moulded ones in porcelain.

Bouquets of flowers trim the shoulders or the waists of many frocks.

VITAL ISSUES

In demanding immediate negotiations for the cancellation of war debts and reparations, the British Labour Party is taking a stand which represents the considered opinion of many of the world's leading economists and statesmen. At the moment, the position has been left in the air by the Lausanne Conference, which, while it agreed that the wiping out of reparations was necessary, made this contingent on Germany's creditors reaching a war-debt settlement with the United States. The situation in this respect is, however, complicated by the U.S. Presidential election, which will have to be decided before America reaches a decision one way or the other. Both the Republicans and the Democrats have expressed themselves against cancellation, although President Hoover favours some quid pro quo arrangement whereby the United States would secure favourable trade concessions, possibly in the direction of lowered tariffs. It must, of course, be remembered that both the Republican and Democratic declarations on this debt issue are largely intended for home consumption, and it is quite conceivable that when the election is over, whichever party succeeds will have to come down closer to realities in dealing with the problem.

The various attempts which have been made for a solution of these inter-related problems of war debts and reparations have so far been quite fruitless. The Hoover holiday, which postponed the payment of all political debts for a year, was not a solution, and in the meantime both the special advisory committee of the Bank of International Settlements and the Lausanne Conference have reached the conclusion that a wiping out of reparations is essential. The world is still faced with the duty of making a final settlement of these issues in order to eliminate a fatal source of over-recurring political danger and economic catastrophe. One suggestion which has been put forward is that if political conditions make a final settlement impossible in the near future, arrangements should be made for a general moratorium of at least ten years, the time to be devoted to cementing international solidarity and the re-establishment of the world economic order on a basis of co-operation instead of economic warfare. Those who urge this plan think that such a policy of general conciliation might bring the United States to make a voluntary remittance of the war payments due.

There can be little doubt that the solution of war debts and reparations will only be found when the nations have solved the general problems of money and credit, production and exchange, in a spirit of practical realism. This will have to be done with the object of rebuilding economic activity on a broad basis, taking into account the systematic and progressive development of the needs of the people and the methodical extension of international exchange. The coming World Economic Conference, if it is handled wisely, should mark the starting point of this new era. If it does not reach agreement of some kind, the whole economic structure of the world may easily collapse, for, as Mr. Baldwin has just stated, we are now at the parting of the ways. Never in history was wise statesmanship more needed. Let us hope that the opportunity soon to be provided will be utilised to the fullest extent possible.

Orchidology at New Heights.

For some time the orchid has reigned as the aristocrat among the tamed or domesticated plants. Horticulturists have taken especial pride in the development of variations of the species. They have travelled far and expended large sums in their efforts to expand the catalogue of known specimens. Mere announcement of orchid shows has been enough to fill great halls with enthusiastic admirers who have lingered lovingly over rare blooms. Collections of orchid plants from many parts of the world have been a hobby of wealthy patrons of floriculture. And why not? The orchid is a monocotyledonous plant, and any plant that bears a name possessing the size, texture and mispronunciation possibilities of monocotyledonous is entitled to a front seat in floriculture. Orchids are abundant in damp equatorial regions, where they display themselves in brilliant form and colour. Some beautiful specimens are to be found on the Peak just now. In temperate climates they express themselves in more humble raiment, the lady's slipper, being a notable example. But all this is aside from the point. Those members of the orchid family which have been winning all the gold medals at the horticultural exhibitions "needn't feel so big." Down in southern Queensland the orchids are not plants—they're trees. They cannot be anything else, for they grow to a height of forty-five feet, bear hundreds of blossoms, and bear the modest name of Galeola foliata monocotyledonous. The discovery of an "orchid tree" in the wilds of Queensland so stirred the "orchidologists" of Australia that plans were soon under way to send a botanical expedition from Melbourne into the area. The party left last month to study the phenomenally large species. When orchids grow to a height of a four-storey building, one may expect the discovery of buttercups as tall as telegraph poles and daisies that are used for flagstaves. And even the beanstalk story becomes almost believable.

The wedding will shortly take place between Mr. Frank Goldby, lecturer, the University, Hongkong, and Miss Helen Rosa Tomlin, 5, Clifton-place, London, en route for Hongkong by the a.s. Comoria.

BIG JEWEL HAUL

THIEVES ENTER HOME AT KOWLOON.

Jewellery valued at $1,500 was stolen from the residence of Mr. J. Rodger, 49 Granville Road, Kowloon, yesterday afternoon.

Prompt action taken by the police resulted in the recovery of some of the stolen property.

Mr. Rodger, who is employed at the Central Agency Ltd., reported the burglary to the police at 4.30 p.m. Thieves had broken in his bedroom on the first floor and after collecting Mrs. Rodger's jewellery had escaped.

The articles stolen were:
A lady's watch, valued at $360.
One platinum ring, $300.
Three gold finger rings, $25.
One diamond ring, $100.
One pearl ring, $60.
Three brooches, $60.
One gold bracelet, $10.
Two necklaces and pendants, $20.
One gold slave bangle, $250.

Miscellaneous pieces of jewellery, $200.

Hongkong currency totalling $130.

Immediately on receiving the report, the police began investigations and within a few hours recovered the valuable gold slave bangle and small pieces of jewellery valued at $200.

"I.O.D. CENTRAL"

(By J. M. KELLEHER)

He's stern, but the sternness is very often an affectation to hide the strong grain of sympathy in his make-up; a sympathy which will come to the surface too often if he is not careful. Sometime he wears three stripes on his white uniformed arm and sometimes he wears a braided shoulder strap. Unconsciously he is a keen student of psychology—his job makes him that way.

You must meet him. He is the Inspector (or perhaps the sergeant) on duty at any Police Station in the Colony.

The voice over the telephone is brusque and business-like—"Inspector on Duty, Central." "Sergeant on Duty Number Two." "I.O.D. Water Police".

If the wife has lost her handbag with the month's pay cheque, or if one of the kiddies has been bitten by a dog, if a thief has broken in and burgled your house or if the cook-boy has gone off to the country with many of your moveable possessions, you'll make your complaint to this man and like him.

How many times has he figured a scene such as this?

A European sergeant has brought a young Chinese woman into the station. Her baskets of fruit and cakes are sufficient to indicate the charge which is to be laid against her. She has been hawking without a licence.

Through a cynical interpreter she tells this story. Her husband has gone to his native village (alternatively, he died last week). The child on her back is her own and so is the one grasping her skirts and gazing with frightened eyes at all the men in uniform. There are three more in the tiny cubicle she calls her home. This is the only way she can get money.

"Five dollars bail" says the man at the desk.

But she hasn't five dollars. As God is her judge, the 43 cents wrapped in a dirty piece of newspaper is all the money she possesses. No, she has no relatives and she cannot find anyone to look after her children if she has to spend the night in the cells.

A look of long-suffering passes between the Inspector on duty and the sergeant who has brought the woman in. Their hands go into their pockets and they make up the bail money between them.

"Now get out of here" thunders the man in charge, simulating great wrath. "Turn up at the Court in the morning and if I ever catch you hawking again . . . ." and any one of twenty threats is employed to make the woman more careful in future.

"Child missing—suspected kidnapping."

That entry appears regularly in the report sheets of every police station in the Colony.

A mother and father walk in to the charge room, jabbering at a furious rate.

"What's wrong with them?" asks the harassed I.O.D. who isn't half way through his morning report yet.

"They say their child is missing" replies the interpreter.

"Have they looked for him?" is the next question and there follows a harangue in Chinese between the interpreter and the bereaved parents.

Finally, "No, they have not looked for him, but someone may have kidnapped the boy. Was it not their duty to inform the police?"

And the entry of "Child missing—suspected kidnapping" goes down on the sheet, to be erased an hour later by the information that the boy was found in another street, playing with a hunch of his cronies.

There are times when over the police group line a strained voice reports an armed hold-up, or even a murder. Rough details are jotted down. The alarm clangs and the emergency unit lines up. Men rush about the station buckling on belts and revolvers. But there is no confusion. The Inspector on Duty is everywhere giving rapid orders and seeing that no hitch occurs in the organisation.

He waits by the telephone for the second, third and fourth reports to come through, sending more men if required or taking with a sigh of relief the information that an arrest has been made and all is now quiet.

It's not the easiest life in the world and the breaks are not always good. Promotion is often a mirage but you rarely hear of a grouch.

Hongkong owes a lot to its Police Force but the pity is so few seem to realise it.

THIS DEPRESSION

By Edward Kelly, Broker.

What with budgets and trade depressions, this Colony needs an Official Spendthrift. In this, we have discovered an infallible method of bringing about a worldwide trade revival.

All the Government has to do is to issue notes free to qualified spendthrifts, who will immediately rush them (the notes, we mean) into circulation.

We can produce garnishee orders, summonses, final notices and threatening letters sufficient to prove our qualifications.

In the morning we shall be lifted out of bed, and carried to the bathroom in a litter, and having been bathed, we shall toy with a little breakfast—some simple little menu like salt haggis and lettuce. Meanwhile one of our valets will mount his motor cycle and ride along inside the wardrobe until he comes to the suit we are going to wear that day. We shall select from our feet the car we think will suit our mood and the rest will be thrown away to be burnt.

We will then drive up to the Treasury and will greet the Hon. Treasurer and say, "Well, old chap, we're afraid you'll have to get out of here. We've bought the place."

"But the records . . ." he'll say. "We've bought the place as a going concern, and it is our intention to convert the building into a Home for Indigent Compradores", we'll answer.

Back at our home, we will stifle a yawn, and turning to another of our valets, say, "Frederick, we want another bathing pool added to our grounds. See that the Shing Mun Dam is completed this month."

"Yessir."

"And throw that stack of bank notes out of the window. We just saw a fly on it."

We may, when properly established, need a little assistance in this sort of thing, and applications from brokers, Government officials, tailors, and other qualified demonstrators should be lodged early together with a $100 note as proof that, to the applicant, money has no value.

A quiet wedding was solemnised in the Kowloon Union Church on Saturday afternoon, when Sergeant James Scrim, of the Hongkong Police Force, was married to Miss Elizabeth Davidson, who arrived from England on the P. and O. a.s. Carthage.

YOUNG SOLDIER'S

truder had preceded them, and on finding himself discovered, Hamilton slid down the verandah and dropped down the short height into the grounds below. As he did so, a mah jong set which he took from the house fell to the ground.

The two women were too frightened to raise an alarm, and the last seen of Hamilton was when he ran down Robinson Road. A complaint was subsequently made to the Inspector General of Police, and that night at 7 o'clock, Inspector Murphy went up to the house where he was furnished with a detailed description of the intruder. Upon his return to the charge room at the Central Police Station, he found Hamilton already in custody and finding the description to fit with the general appearance of the prisoner, taxed him with the earlier incident.

Hamilton admitted it, and, when searched, was found to have in his possession the travelling clock, crucifix and knife and fork belonging to Fr. Bourke, S.J., of the Wah Yan College.

CAR DAMAGED.

The circumstances under which Hamilton came to be arrested that evening were indicated in the third and fourth charges in respect of a private car which he commandeered that evening and subsequently damaged in attempting to drive it.

It seems that on coming down to town from his visit to the up-level district, he wandered to the City Hall, and seeing a private car parked there, he got into it and attempted to start the engine. He had progressed but a few paces before it ran into a tree, and he backed it only to collide with another car. He then abandoned the idea of driving the car, but on next seeing a Northern Telegraph messenger on his rounds, forced him off his bicycle and appropriated his machine.

RUN TO EARTH.

Hamilton rode along Queen's Road as far as Queen Victoria Street, when the hue and cry gradually growing in volume in his rear forced him again to abandon the bicycle at the top of Queen Victoria Street. He ran up Pottinger Street and turned into Stanley Street, being then followed up a staircase by an Indian constable, who had taken up the pursuit.

Finding his escape cut off, Hamilton drew the table knife he had in his possession and menaced the Indian with it, but abandoned further resistance when a blast sounded by the Indian on his whistle brought reinforcements to the spot. He was then escorted to the charge room in the Station further up the hill.

BAD RECORD.

Second Lieut. Stevenson, Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, who was in Court, in reply to a query from the Bench, said Hamilton possessed a very bad military record. Hamilton was only 19, he said, and joined the Army in November, 1929, but in spite of the short time he had been in the Army, had managed to put up a very bad record and had been in military detention several times. His Worship inspected the records of these various offences, and remarked that although he could not take notice of military ones, he must take into consideration the other offences. For a young man Hamilton's record was very bad indeed.

BLAMES ARMY.

Hamilton:—It is not my fault; it is the Army. Accused proceeded to make a statement which was unintelligible to the Magistrate and which had to be explained by the officer in Court as meaning that being under almost continuous detention had driven him (Hamilton) to breaking barracks and commit the offences.

His Worship, in giving his decision, sentenced Hamilton to three months' hard labour for the theft of the mah jong set.

On the charge of driving Mr. Hamilton's car without the permission of the owner, Hamilton was fined $25 or three weeks; and on the charge of luring a driver's licence he was further fined $10.

THE GREATEST RIDDLESOME DAY WE MAY LEARN TO READ ITNATURE'S LOCKED MAGAZINE

Sir Alfred Ewing, the 77-year-old President of the British Association, has been described as the Master Mind of Room 40—the mystery room of the Admiralty, where enemy messages were decoded.

But there is one code to which Sir Alfred, on his own confession, cannot find the key. It is the riddle of the atom—Nature's secret cypher, written in terms of protons, electrons, radiation.

"These things," Sir Alfred said, in his presidential address to the British Association at York, "are still a mystery—a riddle which, some day, we may learn to read."

But science, he declared, was on the eve of great discoveries in relation to the mystery of the atom.

The atom, however, seemingly inert, was mighty in being a magazine of energy, which, for the most part, it locked safely away.

Nursery Game.

Sir Alfred gave a fascinating picture of this highly complex structure in the terms of a nursery game—as "two sorts" of blocks or bricks—the electrons, which are indivisible units of negative electricity, and the protons, which are indivisible units of positive electricity.

"It is," he said, "strangely simple to be taken back, as it were, to the nursery floor and given just two sorts of blocks, exactly alike in each sort, and exactly the same number of each sort, with which to build the universe of material things. The blocks are unbreakable; we cannot produce them, or destroy them, or change them."

Those of the electrons which are within the nucleus (or heart of the atom) doubtless served to bind the protons together; the other electrons constituted, as it were, a voluminous crinoline, or rather a series of crinolines, extending relatively far away from the centre and giving the whole atom an exceedingly open structure.

Unknown Force.

We had to realize that all matter consists of the two kinds of electricity, protons and electrons, held apart, we did not know how. Electricity we now regarded as matter's very essence—the ultimate stuff out of which every atom was built.

"If you ask: 'What is electricity?' said Sir Alfred, "there is no answer, save that it is a thing which exists in unit of two sorts, a positive and negative, with a strong attraction for each other, and that in any atom you find them somehow held apart against that attraction, with a consequent storing of potential energy."

"Why they do not flash together is a mystery—one of the many mysteries which physicists have still to solve."

A New Particle.

A notable event of the year was the strong evidence which Dr. Chadwick, of the Cavendish Laboratory, had found for the existence of what is called a neutron—a type of particle in which an electron and a proton are associated in particularly close juxtaposition.

In this hitherto unknown particle, whose existence the experiments of Dr. Chadwick seem to have definitely proved, we had a new physical entity of extraordinary interest and a powerful tool for further research.

"The engineer," added Sir Alfred, "found himself obliged to admit that no mechanical model of the atom could be expected to give an adequate picture of that strange, new world."

WORK INSTEAD OF RELIEF

NOVEL SCHEME

An effort is to be made by Marlborough (Wilts) Guardians Committee to arrange a scheme whereby able-bodied men in receipt of poor law relief will be provided with agricultural work, the farmer and the Committee each paying half the wages, which are not to exceed 30s. per week.

Several members of the Committee expressed the fear that the scheme might tempt farmers to dismiss their men and re-engage them on the lower terms.

AN ICE-CREAM
SYMPHONYWOMAN AMAZES
SCIENTISTS

A woman bought an ice-cream block from a street vendor. She noticed that when he placed the block against his bicycle bell the bell rang.

In such a way are scientific discoveries made. The woman happened to be Miss Mary D. Waller, lecturer in physics at the London School of Medicine for Women.

Before the British Association at York Miss Waller demonstrated that a solid block of carbon dioxide, which has a temperature of 80 Centigrade, when placed against metal instruments could produce a number of musical—and, in some cases—unmusical sounds.

Frozen Music

Around Miss Waller was an assortment of articles such as a silver canteen, tuning forks, brass rods. Placed against one metal block of carbon-dioxide, made a noise something like the wailing of a child.

Against the cake-stand it emitted a low base obbligato.

Against another metal a crystal clear sound was produced. The explanation of the phenomenon, Miss Waller said, appeared to be that the forces of energy causing the vibrations were produced by the heat of the metal coming into contact with the carbon-dioxide. Steel, brass and silver were the most satisfactory for producing musical sounds.

Inflation Remedy

Professor J. R. Bellerby, a one-armed scientist, advocated to the Economic Science section that the Bank of England should make a new issue of notes free and hand them over to trade. He also suggested a 10 per cent. increase in all State benefits—unemployment, pensions and health allowances.

His remedy for the industrial world's ills is inflation. He said: "The one hope of recovery is something in the nature of a rise of 30 per cent. in wholesale prices in the next two years." There could be no question of repaying the Bank the money given.

Unemployment limited the purchasing power of the people. "Purchasing power," Professor Bellerby concluded, "we can have at any time, in any quantity, and vast bodies of people are craving to spend. Where, then, is the difficulty?"

THIEF WITH CAR AND LUXURY FLATTEA SERVED FOR SALESMAN

A real-life drama illustrating the metamorphosis of old-time Burglar Bill into the modern Bandit with Brains:

Cast

The Bandit with Brains "Dr. Graham" City Jewellers, Messrs. Bravingtons, of Ludgate Hill, E.C.

Scene I.

Messrs. Bravingtons' shop.

Enter "Dr. Graham," middle-aged, well-dressed, and a cultured accent. Inspects some gold watches and asks for a selection to be sent to his house in an hour's time so that a friend could help him choose one to give his son. Gives an address in Welbeck-street, W.—a street famed for its distinguished medical residents—and departs.

Scene II.

A Welbeck-street flat.

Enter one of Messrs. Bravingtons' salesmen, at the invitation of "Dr. Graham," whom he met standing outside beside a luxury car. Tea served from silver tea service while the "doctor" examines the watches and casually asks whether smash-and-grab raiders have caused the firm any losses.

Telephones: "John, bring some fresh tea," and a white-coated servant enters with tea. Converses fluently while waiting for the friend referred to at the shop. Finally asks to see the watches again, and excuses himself as he goes out of the room—and disappears with watches worth £30.

Scene III.

Messrs. Bravingtons' shop.

Enter a Neus-Chronicle representative seeking details about the Bandit with Brains. He is told: "Apparently the doctor went to the Welbeck-street house that morning and engaged a suite of rooms at 15 guineas a week after telling the proprietor that he had been staying at the Savoy Hotel. 'If the man had asked us to take the watches to an hotel we would have taken all possible precautions, but we accepted him as genuine when he gave a professional name and address.'"

ALCHEMY &amp; THE ATOM

Girls who pluck their eyebrows and curl their eyelashes in imitation of the beautiful ladies of the screen will receive a shock to discover what science has to say on the matter.

According to Professor V. Suk, a Czech-Slovakian scientist, of the University of Masaryk, Brno, this method of attaining a film face is also practised by monkeys. Professor Suk gave members of the British Association at York a series of typical film faces to illustrate his researches in the new science of eyebrows and eyelashes.

Negroes and Mongols.

Film stars, he said, had anticipated the researches of science in the way of artificial make-up by some years. Negroes and Mongols had done the same thing as film stars to give them a youthful appearance, and

"We have a shrewd suspicion that monkeys do the same thing." Experiments showed, said Professor Suk, that in babies eyebrows were almost straight and eyelashes turned up. As people grew older the eyebrows curved and the eyelashes straightened.

That "Baby" Like Appearance.

"What film stars have done without realising its scientific meaning," he added, "is to revert to a baby-like appearance. They have straightened their eyebrows, which curved with age, and turned up their eyelashes again."

Eyebrows and eyelashes were definitely hereditary. Whatever the colour of the eyes or hair of one's father or mother, the eyebrows would definitely conform to the colour of one or other of them. In 600 observations it was found that dark eyebrows and eyelashes were predominant whatever the colour of the hair on the head.

Eyebrows to Electrons.

From eyebrows the scientists passed to the study of electrons and the alchemist's dream of transmuting base metals into gold. The transmutation of elements has now been accomplished, it was stated, and scientists are satisfied that ere long gold will be produced in the laboratory.

But at present the cost of transmutation is so enormous and the results so small that there are no practical or commercial possibilities so far.

The Duke, who is working on similar lines to the experiments at the Cavendish laboratory, said: "When we can explode many electrons together, then the alchemist's dream comes true. Anything in the world can then be turned into anything else—gold, or what you will."

How to Cure Seasickness.

"Why are we seasick and airsick?" Dr. T. Gwynne Maitland described scientific experiments in the production of vertigo.

In a talk after his paper, Dr. Maitland, who is medical superintendent of the Cunard Line, told the Neus-Chronicle that exercise was one way of avoiding seasickness—whether you did it by playing a game, or reading, or standing in the prow of the ship your eye fixed on a distant place. "If you can monopolise your attention and prevent yourself from being preoccupied with your own symptoms, you have the best chance of escaping seasickness," he said.

Science and Government.

Professor Miles Walker, of Manchester, who suggested the automatic "press-the-button" Parliament at an earlier meeting, proposed that the Government should invite leading scientific institutions and societies to appoint members on a body of scientists which would co-operate with the Government in formulating plans to deal with the problems facing the country.

DAY OF
SCORING26 GOALS IN

SAINTS ON TOP

Prolific scoring was the order of the day in the Mamak Tournament games yesterday, and in the three matches played no fewer than twenty-six goals were netted. Two teams, the Radio, opposed to the German Club, and St. Andrew's playing the R.E., netted eight times each and thus have the honour of sharing the laurels for the highest score in the league. Against the Tamar the Signals scored seven times.

Yesterday's win by St. Andrew's placed them at the head of the table with the analysis of: Played three, won three, lost nil, drawn nil, 17 goals for, four against six points.

(By "Bully-Off").

By defeating the R.E.s by eight goals to nil at Sookunpoo yesterday St. Andrew's not only maintained their unbeaten record in the Mamak Tournament but with the Radio registered the highest score to date in the competition.

The Club played well throughout but missed many opportunities in front of goal, the chief defaulter being (tied despite the fact that he was responsible for netting seven of the total).

They kept the Army men continually on the defensive and found little resistance when they came within striking distance. Some fine work was done in the centre of the intermediate line by Hamson who frustrated many of the attempts of the Engineers to push their way into the Club's territory. What little they had to do at back, F. Wong and White accomplished admirably, while R. H. Wong in goal was tested twice only. The forwards combined well and with short neat passing movements were able to get through the defence time and time again. None of the forwards were really brilliant and had they been faced with a stronger defence would have had a different tale to tell.

R.E.s SCRAPPY.

The play of the R.E.s was very scrappy and their passing far from accurate. The backs were inclined to keep too far back and when pressed were unable to get the ball away to the forwards. There were no outstanding exponents of the game although Higgins and Harding shone occasionally. The soldiers were very lucky to register any score at all and had it not been for a misunderstanding on the part of Hamson, and the brothers Wong, the Saints defence would have finished with a clean sheet.

From the initial bully the Club exerted pressure and for a time their efforts met with a stubborn resistance. The Engineers gradually gave way under the bombardment and after about ten minutes Guest opened the scoring for St. Andrew's. They went away again from the bully and Fincher, on the left, sent across a nice centre which struck the upright. In subsequent play the R.E.s' keeper ran out to take the ball from Fincher but missed and as the ball trickled to the line Harding just managed to clear as he fell to the ground. Fincher had hard lines again a few minutes later when another of his centres struck the post, but before the interval Guest snatched on to one of his passes and increased the lead.

GUEST CARRIES ON.

In the second half the Civiliana met with little opposition and netted six times. Guest added five and the other was scored by Mackay who was playing at right inner. Leslie scored the only goal for the R.E. following a hard hit down the field by Harding. Three of the Club players chased the ball and each waited for the other to hit it. In the meantime Leslie came on the scene and tapped the ball into the net.

The teams were:
St. Andrew's—R. H. Wong; E. H. P. White and F. Wong; S. McNider, B. Hamson and E. McNider; F. Broadbridge, N. A. E. Mackay, A. E. P. Guest, J. T. K. Gilchrist and E. F. Fincher.

R.E.s—J. Bailey; L. Cpl. Higgins and B. Harding; Waldron, Mullins and Casey; Leslie, Q. M. S. Hayden, Hlnbury, Holmes and Pegg.

DOUBLE 10TH INFLUENCE

CHINESE DISPLAY HOLIDAY SPIRIT IN

HONGKONG F. A. TROUNCED 5-1

(By "VERITAS".)

Chinese A.A.F. 5
(Ip Pak-wa 2, Wong Mee-shun, Tam Kong-pak, Li Shik-yau)
Hongkong F.A. 1
(Dominy)

NANKING had said that the Double Tenth was to be observed quietly, but the Chinese Athletic Federation football team slyly winked at this yesterday afternoon and proceeded to boisterously celebrate the event by trouncing the Hongkong Football Association eleven to the tune of 5-1.

The Chinese players displayed a real holiday spirit and played such perfect football as to leave the Association men wondering why such representative games were ever arranged seeing all they entailed was fruitless chasing after wizards who playfully toyed with a leather sphere to one's huge discomfort and an adverse goal balance at the end of it all.

This may suggest that yesterday's game on the Club ground was nothing but a farce, which is far from the case. But there was never any doubting the pronounced superiority of the Chinese, a superiority which became more and more evident as the game proceeded.

It has been said that South China will not be the same team without the guiding spirit of Lee Wai-tong. Well that spirit was absent from the Chinese team yesterday, but it can't be said that it either benefitted the Association eleven or depressed their

GREAT TEAM WORK.

This was entirely due to the magnificent team work displayed by the Federation. Perfect positioning by the backs, object-lesson football by the halves and crisp passing and devastating shooting by the forwards combined in providing the large crowd of spectators with soccer of the highest order.

As individuals the match was a triumph of brainy, text-book football on the part of Ip Pak-wa (operating at inside left) and

Wong Mee-shun (inside right). These two caused more trouble and anxiety to the Association defence than the whole of another forward line put together. And it was not surprising that Strange, Martin and Rodgers cracked under the severe strain. Ip and Wong not only opened up the game with long passes which made the work of the wigmens mere child's play, but they scored the goals and each one the result of a definite scheme which generally saw the first light of day somewhere on the half way line.

UNCOMPROMISING MOOD.

In addition to this the Chinese half backs were in a most uncompromising mood, and completely subjected the Association forwards until there was scarcely any opposition attack.

Leung Lu-chiu and Lau Mau were a pair of safe backs, though they were only sorely pressed during first half intervals and from these they emerged with their colours flying.

The Association representatives, though always inferior in the finer points of the game, and finally played to a standstill, were spirited enough until the second half which saw an amazing debacle. But there was a half back weakness, particularly in the pivotal position which not only left the defence as an undernourished victim to the virulent Chinese vanguard, but made the work of the Association forwards doubly difficult and half as effective.

RODGERS GALLANT.

Bliss of Kowloon was the only half back to play anything like a game worthy of the occasion. Channing was mediocre, whereas Stevens, also of the Police was definitely outclassed. The work thrust upon Strange, Martin and Rodgers was therefore more than they could cope with, although Rodgers played magnificently in the first half and it was almost entirely thanks to him that the teams crossed over on level terms. He made two blunders in the closing stages when goals were scored, though they were of a tactical nature.

Up among the forwards Leonard operating on the left wing gave the most consistent account, and was never fully subdued by the Chinese defenders. He was as good as any of them in the matter of speed, used his feet well and centred with unfailing regularity. Bryant of the R.A. was never effective and appeared to assume an inferiority complex, probably a reaction to his experience with South China last Saturday.

NEGLECTED GOSANO.

Howe was slow and indecisive as a leader, and was only occasionally in a position which held any danger to the Chinese. He was carefully watched and eventually resigned himself to the policeman-like attentions of his opponents.

Dominy worked with a will and in the initial stages of the game accomplished some excellent constructive work. His thrustfulness kept his markers on the alert, but he too faded away when he found there was no support forthcoming from his intermediates.

B. Gosano on the wing was neglected, never being given a fair chance even to show his paces. The persistency with which the ball was kept away from him was one of the chief reasons why the Association did not score more than one goal.

THE EQUALISER.

The state of the game quickly changed. The Association set up a series of determined attacks, and Howe, obviously on his way to scoring was tripped in the penalty area. Dominy made no mistake from the spotkick.

The scores stood thus at half time, and quite a fair reflection of the game, despite the Chinese superiority in fitness.

But after the change-over, the Association collapsed and the Federation scored at will. Ip Pak-wa, twice threading his way through a crowd of players netted with nice finishing shots, and Tam Kong-pak and Li Shik-yau rounded off dazzling movements to score the others.

Teams:

H.K.F.A.—G. Rodger; Martin, S. Strange; Channings, Stephens, Bliss; B. Gosano, Bryant, Howe, Dominy, D. Leonard.

H.K.C.A.A.F.—Lui Tin-chun; Leung Lu-chiu, Lau Mau; Li Kwok-chiu, Leung Wing-chiu, Tong Kwan; Cheung Lin-hay, Wong Mee-shun, Tam Kong-pak, Ip Pak-wa, Li Shik-yau.

Lee Wai-tong Lost to Local Football

SOUTH CHINA'S BRILLIANT PLAYER
LEAVES FOR JAVA

Lee Wai-tong, the brilliant South China inside left, and one of the cleverest footballers the Colony has ever produced, is lost to local soccer by his departure on Sunday evening for Java to take up a business appointment. It is not expected that Lee will give up football, as there are several football clubs of good standing in Java.

Lee played his final game for South China on Saturday, when he helped his team to victory against the Royal Artillery. The secret of his amazing football is superb ball control and a complete knowledge of the finer points of the game. He never allows himself to become flustered or bawled off the ball, and his understanding with Ip Pak-wa was such as to make their the most formidable combination in local soccer.

A GENIUS.

The inside left, who has a huge goal-scoring list to his credit, started his football as a junior with South China in 1922. Three years later he left for Shanghai and joined the Lung Iwa Club. He returned to his old love in 1930 and has played regularly for them since then.

His genius at football quickly placed him in the Interport class and during the past nine years he has played for both Hongkong and Shanghai in these representative matches.

TENNIS ALSO.

Lee is also a tennis player of no mean ability and had he attached himself more seriously to the game could easily have developed into one of the Colony's leading players. He was particularly useful as a doubles player and last year, in company with Luk Ding-cheong reached the fourth round of the Open Doubles. They fell to Ho Ku-lau and Yew Man-kit only after a match which went the full distance and ran to 27 games.

IP PAK-WA AS SUCCESSOR.

This morning Mr. Mok Hing, the Hon. Secretary of the South China Club said that it was more than probable that Ip Pak-wa, who previously operated on the left wing with Lee, would, especially in view of his performance yesterday, be transferred to the inside left position, but he could not say who would partner him on the wing.

VICTIMS

The match between the Hongkong Cricket Club and the Volunteers, which was resumed yesterday morning, ended in a win for the Volunteers by four wickets.

The Volunteers were dismissed in their first innings for 180 runs, which was the same total compiled by the Club on Saturday. Richardson (33), Ride (28), Griffiths (25) and Kilbee (35) being the chief scorers.

In their second essay, the Club were all dismissed for 163 runs, out of which Duckitt claimed 43 not out and Reid 28 runs. Beck took five wickets for 34 runs.

Griffiths was in magnificent form for the Volunteers in their second innings, and scored 60 runs before he was caught off Smith. Ride added 47 to the total of 155 for six wickets, giving the side the victory by four wickets.

K. C. C. RESULT

Keen cricket saw the finish of the club match between Fincher's and Goodwin's teams at the K.C.C., yesterday, the sub-captain's eleven winning by 34 runs with a wicket in hand.

The feature of the second day's play was the stylish batting of E.C. Fincher, who hit up 73 in his team's final innings before retiring. Afterwards Perry and Burnett carried on the good work and completely subdued the attack.

E. F. Fincher scored brilliantly for Goodwin's team in their second innings his 71 being made out of a total of 149.

Burnett was the most successful bowler of the day capturing 6 wickets for 61 runs.

RADIO SCORE EIGHT.

The Radio Sports Club made their first appearance in the Mamak Tournament at Caroline Hill yesterday when they were opposed to the German Club. Although they did not display their usual form they were too good for their opponents, winning comfortably by eight goals to nil. The Radio had a four goal lead at the interval, the scorers being Harbajan Singh (2) and Gur-bachan Singh (2). After the interval goals were added by Gur-bachan Singh and Awar Singh.

Throughout the Radio showed a better knowledge of the finer points and they combined well. In front of goal they made the most of the opportunities afforded them, but found stubborn resistance in the goal-keeping of Ammann. The German Club, on the other hand, were slow to seize chances and their passing was far from good. Except for an occasional break into the Radio territory they were kept continually on the defensive.

BRILLIANT RECOVERY.

The Signals, in their game with H.M.S. Tamar on the Navy Ground, King's Park yesterday, made a brilliant recovery in the second half after being even at the interval and won by 7 goals to two.

Within five minutes of the bully-off Comby gave the Signals the lead, and almost immediately Tetley replied for the Navy men. Witeway Wilkinson gave the Corps the lead again but before the interval Tetley again brought the scores level.

The second half saw a decided change in the run of play. The Signals completely dominated the play, although on several occasions the Tamar broke away and came dangerously near to scoring. Receiving a pass from Chaffey, Wilkinson gave the Corps the lead and soon afterwards Chaffey netted their fourth from close range. Before the end Wilkinson made himself responsible for meeting twice and Convey scored once.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

Monthly Competition of the Local Club.

The October monthly shoot of the Hongkong Rifle Club was held on the Kowloon Tong Range over the weekend. Twenty members competed in the various classes. The shooting was more difficult owing to the fact that new targets have been made to conform with the Bliley measurements.

At 200 yards the aiming mark is twelve inches and the "bull" five inches in diameter. The scoring on Saturday afternoon was considerably higher than on Sunday. There was no competition in Class "A" owing to the fact that only two members competed in this class. The following were the best scores:

Class "A"	200yds. 600yds. 900yds. Total
P. H. Woodman	15 19 19 53
H. C. Watson	19 19 14 52

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The noisiest comedy scene ever recorded at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios took place during filming of "The Passionate Plumber" in which Buster Keaton, Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante and Polly Moran will be seen shortly at the Queen's Theatre. The climax of this hilarious farce in which the entire cast is involved required more than half a ton of "breakaway" statuary, made of a very light plaster composition, and dishes to be thrown. The first time this scene was attempted, the sound technicians kept their controls adjusted at the normal setting. Buster Keaton seized a large statue and crashed it across the sound-stage where it crashed against a post. "Crunch!" went the plaster. "Curses!" cried the technicians. A light valve had blown out. The remainder of the cast, including Irene Purcell, Gilbert Roland and Mona Maris were instructed to hold their breaths until a specially long light valve could be put in. "Now fire away!" called Director Edward Sedwick. Everyone heaved croakery in all directions. Perspiration stood out on the brow of the "sound mixer" as he watched the dial on his control panel crazily from shoot to another. His hand ached from changing the volume control to relieve the strain on the light valve. After almost five minutes of this terrific racket the scene ended. "Whew!" exclaimed Sedwick. "It's a lucky thing for us. We couldn't retake this scene for every 'break-away' in the studio has been demolished!"

"The Rainbow Trail." Fox Western drama, based on Zane Grey's popular novel of the same name which is showing today at the King's Theatre has a cast of many favourites. In the leading role, that of a lonely cowboy who attempts to rescue a single handed, three persons from a hidden and impenetrable valley, is George O'Brien. Grey's own choice to personate his vivid characters on the screen. He has already played in the eminent author's "Last of the Duncans" and "Riders of the Purple Sage." Another popular player is Roscoe Ates, whose stuttering tongue is a classic of the screen. Likewise, J. Kerrigan, who has played "Song of My Heart," "Lightning," "The Black Camel" and "Merely Mary Ann," and James Kickwood whose successes in both silent and talking pictures are by far too many to enumerate. Among the feminine players are Cecilia Parker who plays opposite O'Brien. While this is Miss Parker's first big role, the dainty, petite and blonde actress is receiving the plaudits of both critics and fans who have already seen the picture. A prominent role is also enacted by Minna Gombell.

"Delicious." Janet Gaynor, whose latest production, "Delicious," showing to-day at the Oriental Theatre, proves again that she is the exception to the "luxury and wealth" rule of the movies. In this picture, in which she is co-starred with Charles Farrell, she is again most appealing as the pathetic little figure surrounded by poverty and squalor through which her innate goodness and charm shine brightest. The story of "Delicious" is consistent with this characteristic of Miss Gaynor except that her occupation is a little more than ordinarily unusual. She is, of all prodigies, a marmalade girl. Or was, before embarking in the steamer of a giant liner to sail for America to find a home with an uncle in Idaho. Charles Farrell as a handsome young sportsman and polo player returning from Europe with his string of ponies, makes the acquaintance of Janet one day while he is down in the hold working with his horses. Janet thinks he is a groom, and tells him all about her experiences in a Scotch marmalade factory. Her job, according to the story she tells, was to stick wax-proof paper on the tops of marmalade jars, a prosaic enough calling even for the movies.

"Hell Divers." Regina Crowe of The American, writes: It appears that Wallace Beery has become a long-term tenant of the Astor Theatre. For though "The Champ" has passed out through its portals, Beery is the star of its worthy successor, "Hell Divers," a vivid epic of the air distinguished by some of the most remarkable features yet presented in a photoplay. The picture is a frank glorification of naval aviation, produced with the finest of the dramatic photography against the awe-inspiring background of that scenic wonderland.

Or was, before embarking in the steamer of a giant liner to sail for America to find a home with an uncle in Idaho. Charles Farrell as a handsome young sportsman and polo player returning from Europe with his string of ponies, makes the acquaintance of Janet one day while he is down in the hold working with his horses. Janet thinks he is a groom, and tells him all about her experiences in a Scotch marmalade factory. Her job, according to the story she tells, was to stick wax-proof paper on the tops of marmalade jars, a prosaic enough calling even for the movies.

"The Rainbow Trail." Fox Western drama, based on Zane Grey's popular novel of the same name which is showing today at the King's Theatre has a cast of many favourites. In the leading role, that of a lonely cowboy who attempts to rescue a single handed, three persons from a hidden and impenetrable valley, is George O'Brien. Grey's own choice to personate his vivid characters on the screen. He has already played in the eminent author's "Last of the Duncans" and "Riders of the Purple Sage." Another popular player is Roscoe Ates, whose stuttering tongue is a classic of the screen. Likewise, J. Kerrigan, who has played "Song of My Heart," "Lightning," "The Black Camel" and "Merely Mary Ann," and James Kickwood whose successes in both silent and talking pictures are by far too many to enumerate. Among the feminine players are Cecilia Parker who plays opposite O'Brien. While this is Miss Parker's first big role, the dainty, petite and blonde actress is receiving the plaudits of both critics and fans who have already seen the picture. A prominent role is also enacted by Minna Gombell.

MODEST RESCUER.

CHINESE SEAMAN'S DIVE FROM FERRY

After he had rescued a man from drowning in the harbour yesterday, Leung Kam, a seaman on the boat, Oriental, modestly retired from the limelight and did all in his power to throw off the mantle of a hero which was being placed on his unwilling shoulders. When the Hongkong-Mongkok ferry was in mid-harbour, Yau Kon-hoi, 38, jumped from the deck in an attempt to commit suicide. He sank immediately but the incident was noticed by Leung Kam on the Oriental. Without hesitation he dived into the water and in a few minutes secured his man. Police Launch Number Nine, in charge of Sergeant P. Roberts was cruising in the vicinity at the time and quickly came to the rescue. Two lifebells were thrown into the water and rescued and rescuer were dragged to safety.

Yau Kon-hoi was unconscious and was taken immediately to the Kowloon Hospital where he recovered. He is now progressing satisfactorily. Leung asked to be allowed to continue with his work and was diffident about making any statement of his own actions. Letters written by Yau, found on the ferry, indicated his intention to "end everything" by jumping in the harbour.

SCHOOL CELEBRATES.

WAH TAI COLLEGE STAGES AN ENTERTAINMENT

Some 300 pupils of Wah Tai College and their relatives and friends celebrated the Double Tenth at the Hotel Cecil yesterday afternoon, with a programme of music, conjuring, physical exercises and play-acting. The main dining room was festooned with flags and bunting, a stage improvised at one end held the attention for over two hours as the students combined to give an entertainment of considerable merit. The proceedings were ushered in with a number of speeches welcoming the visitors, and emphasising the significance of the anniversary, also urging the cultivation of those national traits demanded by a modernized China.

Chinese music was rendered by a quartette of students, following which exhibitions were given of kung-fu and ju-jitsu. Two plays were also performed, one of them a Chinese sketch, this bringing the proceedings to a close.

Mr. Wong Ying-yat was chairman, and among those present was Mr. Liu Sun-ju, Headmaster. Afterwards the large gathering present were entertained to tea.

Those who contributed items were Messrs. K. Y. Fan, C. L. Yuen, C. H. Chow, K. P. Yee and W. Poon.

MEMBERSHIP BAN

North Wales Calvinistic Methodists at Carnarvon, adopted a report by a special committee, which submitted that the Church had the right to refuse membership to licensees' wives if the latter are engaged in the liquor trade.

The question was brought to a head by the refusal of a Carnarvonshire minister to accept transfer of membership from an Anglesey church of the wife of a man who had taken over the licence of a public-house in Carnarvonshire.

The committee, which was appointed to consider the matter, submitted that there was a rule which did not allow the membership of any person who carried on the trade, and expressed the opinion that this included the wife if she took any part in the business.

Hotels and Stations.

A suggestion was made by the Rev. John Hughes (Bangor) that the Committee, by including reference to a licensee's wife, had interpolated something which was not in the rule quoted by them.

"If the rule is applicable to the wife, what about the licensee's servants?" he asked. The Rev. T. E. Davis, a member of the Committee, replied that where a wife took part in the business, it must be assumed that she also had entered the trade.

A question as to the position of hotels was put by Principal Phillips.

"Many of you are putting up this week at hotels," he said. "What about the sale of drink at railway stations and what about railway shareholders?"

The Rev. A. Johns (Liverpool) emphasised the fact that the committee had adhered to its terms of reference, which concerned only the licensee and his wife.

As stated, the report was adopted.

Noyehwang, Oct. 10.

Mr. Clarke, the British Vice-Consul at Mukden, has left Noyehwang for Panshan in order to co-operate with the Japanese authorities who are attempting to negotiate for the release of the British captives, Mrs. Pawley and Mr. Corkran.—Reuter.

Shanghai, Oct. 10. Feng Yu-hsiang and a number of other opponents of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek have issued a circular telegram strongly denouncing the Lytton report and advocating immediate mobilization of the whole nation against Japan and close supervision of the central Government to prevent it yielding to Japan.

Feng Yu-hsiang recently left Shantung for Kalgan. It is suspected that Han Fu-chu drove him out of Shantung.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei

Shanghai, Oct. 10. Three foreign doctors are attending Mr. Wang Ching-wei and have issued a statement saying that he needs complete rest for at least three months, as they have found him to be suffering from diabetes and cirrhosis, with evidence of obstructive jaundice.—Reuter.

318, Wyndham Street.CHRISTIANITY AND COMMUNISM.DR. E. L. ALLEN'S SERMON
AT KOWLOON

Preaching on "Christianity and Communism" in the Kowloon Union Church on Sunday, the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen said:

Communism to-day is nothing less than a new world-religion. It is the most convinced, the most determined, and the most enthusiastic of the religions of mankind. It is a revolt against the whole past, civilisation as we have made it is for it just one gigantic mistake. Human history in any real sense began when the Red Flag was run up over the Tsar's palace at Petrograd: all that went before was of a piece with the Stone Age and Cave Man, a record of ignorance and crime, greed and cruelty, culminating in the horror of the Great War. Criticism of this kind is absolutely merciless. It sees in education only a systematic attempt of the ruling class to keep the truth from the ruled, religion has been subsidised by the rich to keep the people quiet, and patriotism is a device to prevent the workers from uniting against their real foes, the capitalists!

But now a new age is to dawn. 'After us the Deluge!' said the French aristocracy in the days of the old regime. 'After us the Millennium!' says the youth of Russia. Lenin writes: 'New methods of production, a new morality, new forms of life, new forms of heroism and revolution—any action are arising.' And Stalin says: 'We offer a new life, a life which is worth living, a life in which man will no more be bought and sold as an article of commerce, but in which the old type of humanity, in bondage to capitalism, will evolve to a new type, called to be master of nature, master of his own machines, called to possess the earth. The pre-historical period with all its abominations and terrors, its superstition and ignorance, its exploitation and oppression, its wars and crises—is at an end!'

This new movement is frankly and uncompromisingly anti-Christian. 'Religion is dope!' is its slogan. A few years ago in Russia the walls of almost every village were placarded with the words 'God and vodka are the enemies of the Five Year Plan!'

Yet it is nothing if it is not itself religious. It has its idols, for Marx and Lenin are revered as demigods. It has its Bible, with a dogma of verbal inspiration, for for to any man who questions what Marx has written! It has its great missionary enterprise, administering huge funds and sending men out to the ends of the earth to preach its Gospel. Communism is sure that Russia can never be saved till the whole world has shared its salvation. There is something in it too of Old Testament prophecy. I have felt that as I have listened to a Communist orator speaking of the law of righteousness by which the world is ruled and how a nation will perish soon or late which does not care for its poor.

The Church and State.

How did this amazing phenomenon arise? Whence did this anti-Christian come? Many of us will remember the message of Tolstol to his time. He too said the Church and State were built in Russia on privilege and injustice and the neglect of the common people, he called the whole world to go back to Galilee and order its life afresh by the words which Jesus spoke in the Sermon on the Mount. That opportunity was lost; Russia and the world refused to listen to the voice of Christ speaking through the lips of Tolstol, and now they have to listen to the voice of anti-Christian speaking in Mark and Lenin.

Perhaps the question of supreme importance to-day is that of Christianity and Communism. What attitude shall we take up to this new world-force which proclaims itself our mortal foe? I was speaking once at a meeting attended by a number of Communists and after I had finished, one of them rose and said, 'That is all very fine, but what we want to know is—when the struggle comes between the haves and the have nots, on which side shall we see you?' I answered—and it seems to me the only possible answer—'If ever, which God forbid, there should come to be armed conflict between those who have been wronged and those who have wronged them, I should be in sympathy with those who have been wronged, in so far as they seek justice. But I should beg them to find a better way than violence and hatred and the class-war. For if this world is bad enough, you will never get a better one out of propaganda and envy and the cannon's mouth!

A Swedish writer tells in one of her novels of a counterfeit image of Christ which is set up and worshipped in a Sicilian church. It works miracles, heals the sick, cures for the poor, composes village quarrels, and sets the whole population at work building a railway on Enna. But a travelling monk comes by, denounces the imposture, and would have burned the image, had it not been snatched out of his hand in the nick of time. He goes to report to the Pope what he has done, and the Pope tells him that the false Christ is the symbol of the working-class movement, anti-clerical, anti-religious, and in the hands of extremists. 'Why,' asks the Pope, did you want to burn it? Why did you not bring it to the true Christ, that it might know its Master and worship Him? When will you learn wisdom? Why do you not take this great popular movement, while it is yet like a babe wrapped up in swaddling clothes and lay it at the feet of Jesus?'

VISCOUNT BYNG
PROMOTEDFIELD MARSHAL'S RANK

(Our Own Correspondent).

London, Oct. 10.
It is officially announced that Viscount Byng of Vimy has been promoted to the rank of Field
Marshal in succession to the late
Viscount Plumer.

Viscount Byng, who recently
retired from the post of Chief Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, has had a most active career, having seen service in the Soudan, South Africa and the Great War. In the latter, he was promoted General after his brilliant advance towards Cambrai in November, 1917, while he gained another big success in August of

For his War services, he was raised to the Peerage and received
a grant of £30,000. He retired from the Army in 1919, and from 1921 to 1926 he was Governor-General of Canada.

THIS MORNING'S BLAZETHREE BUILDINGS
INVOLVED

At about 3 o'clock this morning,
a fire broke out at No. 22, Jervols Street, in the Nam Pak Hong business quarter, and burnt for
an hour, causing extensive damage
to the building and involving the
two adjoining buildings, Nos. 20
and 24, before it was extinguished by the Brigade.

The firemen were early on the scene after the call, locating the
outbreak in the cockpit of the ground floor of the building. The origin of the fire still remains a mystery as the building had remained unoccupied for some time,
and in default of a better theory,
it can only be surmised that a candle or other person sleeping in
the cockpit had inadvertently set
the place alight with a carelessly
discarded cigarette-end.

Although strenuous efforts were made by the Brigade to localise the outbreak, Nos. 20 and 24 were in a short space of time involved
in the conflagration, and were

TAXI DRIVER
FINEDFOR DANGEROUS
DRIVING

A summons for dangerous driving was brought against a taxi driver, at the instigation of Mr.
W. P. Thompson (Assistant Superintendent of Police), before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning.

The incident occurred outside Messrs. Butterfield & Swire's offices on the afternoon of September 24 last, when Mr.
Thompson was about to park his car on the stand in the middle of the road. He was travelling in the direction of the ferry wharf and had signalled his intention of turning into the park. He had answered when he suddenly noticed, through his driving mirror, a taxi almost on him. He then swerved to the left and the defendant's vehicle passed at a speed estimated at 20 miles an hour. It was a Race Day and taxi was apparently in a hurry to return to the stand for passengers.

The defendant stated that he was following the complainant and when they had reached Connaught Road, Mr. Thompson turned to go into the park. The defendant sounded his horn and the complainant then turned to his left, defendant then passing.

When questioned as regards the speeds, the defendant said that Mr. Thompson was travelling from 10 to 15 miles an hour when he turned to the right, while the taxi was going about ten miles an hour.

His Worship pointed out that the speeds were impossible and registered a conviction. A fine of $25 was imposed.

In another case of dangerous driving, Sub-inspector Saunders summoned the driver of a motor lorry who took a corner in Cain Road at an excessive speed. The defendant was fined $20.

partially damaged before the vast amount of water pumped into
them had the desired effect.

The South British Insurance
Co., and the Heung On Insurance
Co., are reported to be amongst the concerns affected by the fire.
